The President Has Power
Bad for Roumania
A Swiss Rockefeller
One Rich American

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company.

The people have a claim on the "privately-owned" railroads; they financed those roads in war, saved them from bankruptcy, guaranteed and paid high dividends to stockholders.

The people have given to the railroads all their rights on what are actually public highways that should be publicly owned.

The President represents the people, has their authority, he has the right to make the railroads run as he chooses while this emergency lasts.

There was no question as to that right in the time of war. This also is war, capital and labor fighting, and the nation the victim of the battle.

A report from Roumania says forty Jews have been shot by military authorities for political offences, although the king had declared an amnesty. The forty were shot down, one by one, as they were led to a spot where they were supposed to be set free.

That, presumably, will not help the sale of Roumanian bonds just offered in this country. Jewish financiers are large buyers of bonds.

Miss McCormick rejoins her Swiss hero, Mme Oser, thirty years older than she. You can imagine much worse matches for a young girl than such a man. It's much better than marrying a young American gentleman whose business is getting himself sunburned in Winter at Palm Beach and plucked in Summer at the races.

Oser's age makes no difference. According to Plato men should have children after they are fifty. That he is a riding master means nothing. If Bayard himself came to life in this day, or Duguesclin, or Gaston De Foix, about the only job he could hold would be that of riding master.

It will be an interesting wedding. As you know from Galton, the genius of fathers is inherited through the female line. It might make a difference to the Swiss republic if, thirty years from now, a young Mr. Oser, with the John D. Rockefeller blood, should become active. Waterfalls now going to waste, probably would be developed.

Whether the Swiss system of government ownership of railroads would survive is a question.

A rich American in Europe hired an ordinary Italian as valet, and treated as such that human brother. Soon the valet's hair began to change color, and the ingenious valet "confessed" to the American that he was in reality a nobleman, ruined by patriotism and war. He had dyed his hair to find humble work.

Thereupon the rich American took that human brother, no longer a valet but a nobleman, to his arms, made much of him, appointed him secretary.

The valet immediately proceeded to blackmail the rich American's wife. Now they have put him in jail and the story ends for the time being.

Europe gets this impression that rich visiting Americans often are rich assets, and they are quite right.

Henry Ford mixed poetry and facts. He says the labor unions are managed really by Wall Street capitalists for their own

GRIFFITH DIES AS CORK FALLS

Broker C. L. Hayden Arrested

SHOCK IS FATAL TO IRISH CHIEF

Founder of Sinn Fein and Signer of Treaty Passes Away Suddenly

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, Ire., Aug. 12.—Arthur Griffith, President of the Dail Eireann, dropped dead here today of shock when the news of the fall of Cork reached him.

His death occurred at 9:45 a. m., in St. Vincent's Hospital, Dublin, which he entered ten days ago for an operation for tonsilitis.

He was recovering from the operation and apparently was regaining his normal strength during the last few days.

In fact, Mr. Griffith had responded to his treatment so well that he was able to leave the hospital daily for his official duties, returning to the institution at night.

This morning he ate a hearty breakfast, and was going upstairs when he suddenly collapsed. He was carried into his room and a doctor was immediately summoned.

A priest was then sent for, and he had just finished administering the last rites of the church when Mr. Griffith expired.

Fires in Cork Started by Rebels

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 12.—Telegraphic communication between London and Dublin was restored at 3:40 a. m. after a suspension of about five hours as a consequence to the surprise attack by Irish Irregulars on the Dublin Central Post Office. The attack resulted in temporary cutting off of communication not only with England but apparently with other parts of Ireland.

Whether Dublin has obtained a fuller story of the capture of Cork by the National Army troops than was contained in the brief official report is unknown here. A traveler arriving at Waterford from Cork said the National troops were in complete possession of the city and that firing had ceased.

Earlier reports recorded reckless looting and destruction of property by gangs of armed youths in civilian clothes. The work of these bands, it was said, included the looting of the government house and other buildings.

On Tuesday, according to these reports, the irregulars made an immense bonfire of the huts belonging to the Victoria Barracks, whose flames terrified the inhabitants into believing that the whole city was on fire. This partly accounts for

ROADS OF WEST FACE TIE-UP AT MANY POINTS

Complete tieup of Western railroads as the result of walkouts by engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen, moved nearer today.

This situation caused more concern that the shopmen's strike itself.

It is of vital importance to the East since many of the roads are heavy carriers of food supplies. The Santa Fe today placed an embargo on perishables.

The railroads affected to date are:

Santa Fe
Southern Pacific
Illinois Central
Louisville and Nashville
Denver and Rio Grande
Wabash
Union Pacific
Oregon Short Line.
Missouri, Kansas and Texas
Missouri Pacific.
Western Pacific.

Travelers were stranded at many points. Passengers held up at Needles, Cal., reported: "We are as contented as anyone could be hundreds of miles from home in a desert with the thermometer standing at 112 degrees at 7 o'clock at night." They took up a temporary home in the little parks around the railroad station.

Five hundred travelers stranded at Ogden, Utah, because of the strike of Southern Pacific firemen sent a telegram of protest to President Harding.

Chicago, Aug. 12. (By the Associated Press).—Paralysis of railroad transportation in various sections, particularly the Far West, Northwest and Southwest threatened today as "Big Four" Brotherhood men abandoned work or called meetings to consider quitting in protest against presence of armed guards on railroad properties or against handling alleged defective equipment.

Switchmen joined engineers, firemen, conductors and brakemen in protests against working where troops, deputy United States marshals and other guards were on

BUCKETING CHARGE IS MADE

Member of Defunct Firm Also Accused of Theft in Secret Indictment

First arrest in the wholesale bucket shop investigation came today when Clarence L. Hayden surrendered.

Secret indictments were returned by the Suffolk County Grand Jury against half a dozen brokerage houses, some out of business.

Among them was one against the firm of Higgins, Hayden & Company.

Immediately after the indictment was returned Mr. Hayden of the firm surrendered himself and was arrested. He was arraigned in Superior Court on a charge of larceny, pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,500. Bail was furnished.

The indictments were returned by Judge Bishop at noon. They followed the evidence which was presented for three days by Assistant Attorney-General Albert Hurwitz.

"I'll clean up every bucket shop in Boston," was the assistant Attorney-General's threat.

Three indictments were returned against Hayden. In the first there were three counts, larceny of $1,380 from Walter Hampton, larceny of $12,75 from Thomas V. Griffith and larceny of $359 from Evelina L. Brown.

The second indictment charged him with keeping a bucket shop, and the third was a blanket charge of larceny.

WEEK ENDERS MAY LOOK FOR WET DAY

The weather man has a gloomy forecast for week-enders.

Rain tonight and unsettled conditions with occasional showers tomorrow is the prediction. The temperature will be moderately cool with northeast winds. Rain fell today along the entire Atlantic coast from Nantucket to Cape Hatteras. Boston with a temperature of 64 was the warmest spot in New England.

TRACE PLOT TO KILL EX-IRISH DETECTIVE

London, Aug. 12.—Major G. Nelson, former chief of the intelligence department of the Royal Irish Constabulary, found in dying condition in a field near Ashburton, Devonshire, is recovering. Scotland Yard believes a clue has been found to the identity of the men who tried to assassinate Neilson.

'Red Head!' and the Girls Went to the Mat

Business of protruding tongues and then—bam!

That was the flapper fight in Main street.

Second round in District Court today.

In this corner—Rose Kasierska with a torn waist.

In this corner—Irene Cronin with her gorgeous red hair.

Business of much conversation, a lot of talk from witnesses and then the decision.

Referee Judge Louis Riopord: "Kiss and make up, girls."

They did.

CAVE WIFE IS HELD IN DEATH ATTEMPT

With knees knocking together in mortal terror, George M. White today left his home at No. 1 Greenville street, Roxbury, where he has kept himself barricaded for four days. Insisting on two policemen for protection, he was finally persuaded to appear in Woburn Court.

When he arrived he confronted his wife, Mrs. Mary White, who had surrendered herself to the police and was to be arraigned on a charge of assault and attempted murder upon White, her sixth husband, for his insurance.

White locked himself up in his room following an alleged attempt on the part of his wife to drown him in a pond where they went fishing.

"Try the case now and be done with it," Mrs. White told Judge McGuire.

When the judge found she had no attorney, he held the woman in bail of $2,000 for a hearing in two weeks.

White told reporters his wife beat him up and made life undurable for him, after he found she had been married previously.

TUGS TRY TO FLOAT CRUISER RALEIGH

Halifax, N. S., Aug. 12.—Wrecking tugs today began the work of refloating the British cruiser Raleigh, which went aground off Belle Island.

The U. S. S. Olympia, which went to the aid of the Raleigh, returned here. The United States fleet is scheduled to sail for American ports tomorrow. Admiral McCully and officers of the fleet entertained 5,000 children aboard the squadron today.

IGNORES THREAT OF DEATH

Widow of Man Slain by Blackhand Takes Out License to Wed

With the Black Hand's threat of vengeance hanging over her, Mrs. Jennie Scarpone today filed marriage intentions in the City Hall.

She appeared with her fiance, Guerino Colangelo, while six men were being tried for the murder of her husband, Michael Scarpone, on January 20, 1922. A seventh, Luigi di Padova, has been committed to the Hospital for the Insane at Bridgewater. Thus doth hot love laugh derisively at death.

Both gave the same address—33 Charter street. She said she was 22 years of age, and Golangelo gave his age at 26.

Golangelo, who said he was a laborer, in no way has figured in the killing of Scarpone.

Throughout all the proceedings which followed the killing, when Scarpone refused to pay tribute to the Black hand, Mrs. Scarpone has been active in the search for the murderers and in their prosecution. She refused to be swerved when warned that her activity in bringing her husband's murderers to justice would bring her own death.

The night of January 19 Scarpone received his last warning. It informed him that unless he paid the money asked he would be slain the next day. He refused to pay the money.

His wife had scarcely closed the door the next morning, upon her husband leaving for his work, when shots were heard. She ran to the street and found Michael on the pavement. Four men were fleeing down the street.

Despite warnings that it meant her own death, the plucky widow went to the police and turned over the evidence which resulted in the arrest of the seven men now being tried for the murder. She has received many threatening letters since.

Struck by Engine

WOMEN TELL CULT SECRETS

Long's Temple of Isis Plan Caused Patrons to Drive Him From Homes

To the Metaphysical Club on Huntington avenue come many women who are earnestly endeavoring to reach a higher plane of thought.

Also, it must be confessed, the club is visited by those who are called gadders—gullible moths who flutter about the candle of New Thought from the viewpoint of a fad rather than a philosophy.

Among the visitors to the club in 1920, was a tall, slender, man with hirsute architecture along the lines affected by William Jennings Bryan before he started the world by getting a haircut. His face had the pallor of the aesthete. He murmured his platitudes with the slow phrasing of a yogi.

Without appearing to be guilty of self-advertisement, the interesting stranger let it be known that he was the intimate of belted earls, gar-

RUFUS SCOTT, EX-N. Y. TAX MAN, DEAD

Pittsfield, Mass., Aug. 12.—Rufus L. Scott, aged 87, who had served as tax commissioner of New York, on the Brooklyn board of aldermen and Brooklyn Board of Education, died at his Summer home in Lanesboro, after an illness of one day. Death occurred in the room where Mr. Scott was born.

tered knights and suspendered barons. In the clubroom it became noised about that it was none other than Professor Arthur Griswold Long of London. His card, which he presented freely, contained the words "of London." When he was invited to deliver a lecture on birth control the cards read "by Professor Arthur Griswold Long of London."

It was apparent that all Professor

LONG AIMED TO REVIVE RITES OF EGYPTIAN GODDESS

CULT LEADER DECEIVED SCORES OF WOMEN

Long needed to transform him from a loss to a prophet was a patron.

The first of the frequenters of the Metaphysical Club to undertake this role was Mrs. Emilie R. Frost of Lexington Park. Thither a reporter of the Boston American was dispatched to learn how the protege conducted himself.

Mrs. Frost was reluctant to discuss at length her adventure in taking a patron. She admitted, however, that Professor Long's stay at her home, while far from sweet, was very short.

It appears that a habit of sleeping in his clothes was a contributing factor to his being moved to the domicile of Mrs. Perley Tibbets of Reed street, Lexington. There, too, his stay was brief. Mrs. Tibbetts didn't care for his taste in literature and art.

The professor sought and found sanctuary in the home of Mrs. Frederick W. Towner. Thence, after a stay that was all too short, he migrated to the home of Mrs. Charles W. Webster, of No. 331 Massachusetts avenue, while the following six months he changed his domicile half a dozen times, and in each instance he was invited to curtail his visit.

And all because he tried to interest his hostesses in the plan for a Temple of Isis.

PLANS FOR TEMPLE.

In the palmy days of Rome, before it became a 9 o'clock town, the Law and Order League closed the Temple of Isis. They ruled that the rites were too disgraceful for even the Romans to witness.

Worship of the God Osiris and his companion, Goddess Isis, was introduced into Rome from Egypt and the rites involved the lowest form of moral degradation.

Professor Arthur Griswold Long, erotic founder of a new love cult, had one abiding dream.

In Boston he planned to re-establish the Temple of Isis, with the ritual according to the ancient form, but "of course, somewhat modernized and curtailed."

In pursuit of this quest he managed to work himself in as a guest at the homes of scores of women in Boston, Lexington, Dorchester, Roxbury, Cambridge and other nearby centres of culture.

The long-haired sex seer ingratiated himself with his lofty worded analyses of the new freedom, the higher life and the subliminal reflex of the unconscious mind, with sundry trimmings.

Some of the women entertained Long for as great a period as two months. In other cases the visit was ill necessary to order him out of their homes within twenty-four hours.

Invariably his philosophic discourse would wind up on the one theme that interested him—sex.

On several occasions the profe or entwined his sinuous arms in amatactics which resulted in his arrest the other day on complaint of the mothers of three girls, the oldest of which was ten years.

KICKED OUT BY MOTHER.

On one occasion he was practically kicked out of a fashionable home when he was caught showing portraits in a book to the little daughter of the woman of the house. The book was titled "Complaints of Women," by Charles Meigs.

Mary T. Neary, mentioned in some of Dr. Long's memoranda as a worker on one of his committees, wrote to the Boston American denying that she had ever held any such position. Mrs. Neary said Long asked her as secretary to a musical event in Huntington Hall two years ago, and that he may have learned her name at that time. She insists, however, that she had no connection with him whatever.

In the meantime Long conducted a national correspondence with women with whom he had become acquainted through advertisements.

The nature of this correspondence is admirably illustrated by a letter which was written to him by a Grace Baptiste of Oklahoma City, Okla., as follows:

LETTER FROM GIRL.

"Dear Mr. Long:

"No, I did not misunderstand your ad, but did not remember correctly. I had loaned my magazine to a friend and thought it was your ad.

"I do not know what you meant by 'sex communion.'"

Professor Long replied as follows:

"Please forgive the delay in sending you the lesson. I have been busy and had to rewrite it.

"Answering your question on sex communion, I thought this was a good expression to describe the act of nature between sexes which at certain times results in childbirth. All childbirth 'is divine and holy, whether so-called illegitimate or legitimate. The married woman is the fallen woman, not the other. Girls, unmarried, who have given birth to a child, have been wrongly used in the past. It never was their shame but always their glory, did they but know this divine truth."

It was this philosophy which got Long the air in a great many instances.

He charged his correspondent $2 for the information, which she promptly remitted.

In a sort of catechism prepared for new students in his sorority of love, the professor had several questions. Among some of the things he asked in his questionnaires were these:

QUESTIONS HE ASKED.

"What do you understand by the Fall of Man?"

"What do you understand by the Tree of Knowledge?"

"What is morality?"

"What is immorality?"

"What gives you the greatest pleasure?"

"Do you consider adultery wrong?"

"Where is heaven?"

The answer to these questions, all in the same strain as his letter to the Oklahoma lady, were contained in the professor's handbook of love, which he saw fit to call "Christian Spiritualism."

His dream of the cult in which the initiation was a banquet in which all those present were unclad is voiced in a letter written to a Mrs. Reed, in which he says:

"The project which I wish to call to your attention is the formation of a more or less secret society or cult, founded upon the ancient doctrine of Egypt—the cults of Osiris and Isis, in which I have discovered the origin of all truth."

In this connection, a reference to the Encyclopedia America reveals that the worship of Osiris "was limited during Rome but the rites proceeded to such an excess of licentiousness that it was at length prohibited by law."

What licentious Rome found advisable to prohibit, Professor Long planned to establish in Boston, for he continues:

"In short, my idea is to found a Temple of Isis, with its gods, goddesses and ritual, according to the most ancient forms, but of course somewhat modernized and curtailed.

"Please regard this letter as sacred to yourself, as a brother initiate. Communicate the contents to no one at this time, except to those (and only wealthy ladies) who might feel it a blessed privilege to assist in the undertaking."

WRITES TO BROKERS.

Finding himself financially embarrassed in his project for the Temple of Isis in Boston, the professor wrote to Whitney & Elwell, State street brokers. In this letter he said:

"My business is that of a music teacher, and I would like to raise some money to go into a new studio, and for other purposes.

"How low will you sell out of woman in? What grace and balm she pours into man's waiting heart! What a sweetness to give her the vegetation of love when she opens up her Lear to receive.

"The body is the highest good we can know in this world. Also is the divine means of ordering our material business."

The second of the seer's thoughts were indicated by his selection of literature.

In the room where he was arrested following his alleged improper conduct with the three girls were found the following books:

"Passions of Women," by Charles Schultze, profusely illustrated.

"The Natural Sexual Adviser—Hidden Secrets Revealed." by Caratons, Jordan and Anderson.

"Sex—the Underlying Quantity," by Dr. Alexander J. McIvor-Tyndal.

"The Spiritual Function of Sex," by the same author.

"Creative Sexual Science," by O. S. Fowler.

Professor Long cad also a strange taste in poetry. One that he admired enough to paste up and frame reads in part as follows:

"A blonde girl in a quiet ancient room,
A girl with young lips choked with sorrow-long;
And eyes grown dim from dreaming over-long;
Give me old wine steeped in the sun and strong,
Oh, may I feel the beat of girlish lips,
And gentle finger tips"

"DIDN'T PAY BOARD."

"As a violin instructor Professor Long was a good bootblack."

That is the opinion held by Mrs. Ada Ernest of No. 97 Lucerne street, at whose home the exponent of mysticism and other kindred subjects lived for eight weeks.

"For eight long weeks he lived at my house and in that time he did not pay me one cent for board. He came to me and begged me to allow him to stay at the house. He never tried to get out but used to pose as a violin instructor.

"How big a class did he have? That's a joke. I, no time did he have more than two or three and they only came a few times. I often told him he was on the wrong track, but he insisted that 'some day things will be better.'

"I asked him to pay $2 a week board, but he couldn't. Finally, about six weeks ago, I told him to move and he did.

"I always thought that there was something wrong with him and when his pupils were born I watched the proceedings.

WROTE TO BACK BAY.

"When I came back from the hospital after being ill for a short time, he told me that he had written to several 'highbrows' in the Back Bay. When I asked him what the letters were about, he said: 'They are for my own benefit.'"

Entries in Tournament for Choice of "Hub Queen" and Free Trip to Atlantic City Pouring in

Has Greater Boston any charming girls?

We'll say it has!

And you'd say so, to, if you saw some of the photographs that are pouring into the Boston American office for entrance in the MOST CHARMING girl tournament this newspaper is conducting.

The girl whom the judges select as the MOST CHARMING will be chaperoned by Queen of the Hub" and awarded a free trip to Atlantic City for one week during the wonderful pull parsant. Not only will all the expenses of "Miss Boston" be paid, but she will be permitted to take her mother along as chaperon. Mother's expenses also will be paid by the american.

NAMES DORCHESTER GIRL.

Among the charming girls whose photographs have been entered in the tournament is 22-year-old Miss Margaret Cameron of No. 774 Dudley street, Dorchester. She was nominated for the trip to Atlantic City with all its attendant pleasures, by her fiance, Robert A. Edmonds of No. 39 Stoughton street, Dorchester, a World War veteran, who hopes to make Miss Cameron his bride within a year. He also nominated his fiancee's sister, Miss Florence Cameron, 24 years old, the same address.

Another girl of unusual charm who has been entered in the tournament is Miss Alice Gustafson, the twenty-year-old daughter of Inspector Gustaf Gustafson of Boston police headquarters. She is a violinist of exceptional ability and lives with her parents at No. 11 Wachusett street, Jamaica Plain. She was nominated by H. C. Hanson of No. 49 Pond street, Jamaica Plain.

Brockton's first entry, that of 21-year-old Miss Lillian M. Simpson of No. 53 High street, came from Joseph H. Greene of No. 4 Bradford Place, Brockton. In nominating Miss Simpson for the gala trip to America's greatest watering place, Mr. Greene wrote: "She is a girl who has won the respect and honor of all the people she has met. She has a wonderful personality and is a talented amateur dancer."

ELEMENT OF ROMANCE.

Another charming entrant is Miss Mae Caine, twenty-one years of age, an accountant living at No. 127 West Newton street, South End. Many of her friends regard her as the loveliest and most fascinating young woman of their acquaintance.

An element of romance has entered the tournament. The "Charming Girl" editor received the following note which speaks for itself—the proceedings.

"There is a young beauty, a charming miss, working at No. 21 Cornhill, with light brown hair and blueish eyes, but, alas, I don't know her name.

(Signed) True A C B."

We hope somebody nominates her for the trip.

The rules of the tournament are simple. Girls of fourteen to twenty-five, inclusive, may enter by filling out the coupon printed in the Boston American and sending it WITH PHOTOGRAPH to this newspaper.

When the tournament closes, prominent men and women who are to act as judges will see all the photographs. They will select twenty-five and then request the selected girls to meet them. From the twenty-five candidates the "Queen of the Hub" will be chosen.

$10,000 JOB POSSIBLE.

When the "Queen of the Hub" goes to Atlantic City she will have an opportunity of winning a $5,000 Golden Mermaid, the prize to be awarded to the loveliest girl taking part in the Bathing Revue. She may also win a $10,000 position in California in the movies. Many motion picture magnates will attend the Atlantic City pageant, September 6, 7 and 8, in search of charming girls.

Girls may obtain a free sitting at any of the following studios and one photograph will be furnished free for this tournament—Otto Sarony, No. 146 Tremont street; Ye Craftsman, No. 561 Boylston street; Bachrach, No. 647 Boylston street; Notman, No. 1256 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge; Champlain, No. 1-3 Tremont street; Marlboro, No. 164 Tremont street; Perham, No. 165 Tremont street, and Wald, No. 165 Tremont street. Drop in to one of these studios and plan to have a good photograph taken, if you haven't one now.

THOUSANDS GIVEN AWAY BY WOMAN

The will of Lucy A. Cheiky of Woburn, who died July 21, filed today, leaves the income for life, from $20,000 to her niece, Gertrude B. Hutchins of Watertown, and bequests of $1,000 each to the following: Fox Hills cemetery at Billerica, for a memorial gateway; Home for Aged Women at Woburn, First Parish Unitarian Church at Woburn, First Congregational Unitarian Church at Billerica, Tewksbury Congregational Church and Woburn Charitable Association.

reports at that time the city had been burned. These reports were never confirmed.

Eamon De Valera's whereabouts are still unknown.

London, Aug. 12.—Six irregulars were killed and twenty wounded in fighting at Cory before the Free State troops occupied the city, said advices from Cork today. A number of Free Staters have disappeared in the Cork area. It is feared they were murdered.

The Free State soldiers received a tremendous reception from the citizens when they entered Cork. The irregulars had held the city in a reign of terror.

The retreating Irregulars at Cork burned six barracks and three bridges. The Free Staters captured fifty prisoners at Cork.

Griffith Leader in Forming Free State

The death of Arthur Griffith, coming with such startling suddenness, marks the passing of one of the foremost figures in Ireland. He was one of the conspicuous men behind in the creation of the new Irish Free State.

He was one of the founders of the Sinn Fein movement in Ireland, and from the beginning has been among the foremost leaders directing its activities.

He has been somewhat out of the limelight, however, during the recent military activities, which have been largely directed, on behalf of the Free State forces, by Michael Collins, head of the Irish provisional government, set up under the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty.

Mr. Griffith formerly was an editor of Dublin, and later established the newspaper, "United Irishmen," followed by the "Sinn Fein" and then the "Nationality."

STARTED SINN FEIN.

He first attracted attention by his uncompromising attitude for abstention by Irish members from attendance in the British Parliament. This idea gradually formed the nucleus of the Sinn Fein organization which took the place of the Irish Nationalist movement.

When the tournament closes, prominent men and women who are to act as judges will see all the photographs. They will select twenty-five and then request the selected girls to meet them. From the twenty-five candidates the "Queen of the Hub" will be chosen.

$10,000 JOB POSSIBLE.

When the "Queen of the Hub" goes to Atlantic City she will have an opportunity of winning a $5,000 Golden Mermaid, the prize to be awarded to the loveliest girl taking part in the Bathing Revue. She may also win a $10,000 position in California in the movies. Many motion picture magnates will attend the Atlantic City pageant, September 6, 7 and 8, in search of charming girls.

Girls may obtain a free sitting at any of the following studios and one photograph will be furnished free for this tournament—Otto Sarony, No. 146 Tremont street; Ye Craftsman, No. 561 Boylston street; Bachrach, No. 647 Boylston street; Notman, No. 1256 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge; Champlain, No. 1-3 Tremont street; Marlboro, No. 164 Tremont street; Perham, No. 165 Tremont street, and Wald, No. 165 Tremont street. Drop in to one of these studios and plan to have a good photograph taken, if you haven't one now.

In 1917, Griffith was elected presiding officer for the opening of the Sinn Fein conference in Dublin. In later was nominated as Sinn Fein delegate from East Cavan.

During the peace conference at Paris in 1919 he was chosen as an Irish delegate to present the Irish case, but failed to get a safe conduct from the British government prevented his attendance.

In 1921, Mr. Griffith was elected acting president of the Irish national assembly in the absence of Eamon de Valera, who was in the United States. In October of the same year he was elected one of the permanent vice-president's of the Sinn Fein.

JAIL DELIVERY FAILED.

Griffith was arrested in Dublin in November, 1920, and spent seven months in Mountjoy prison. During his imprisonment he issued a message to the Irish people as to the conduct of the Sinn Fein organization. An attempt was made to rescue him from Mountjoy prison, but the armored car used for that purpose failed to carry out its mission.

The return of De Valera from America was attributed to Griffith's imprisonment, as de Valera, upon his return, resumed the active direction of Sinn Fein affairs.

Early in June, 1921, there were reports of a London conference, at which Irish leaders would be invited to consult with members of the British Cabinet. Griffith was mentioned among the probable delegates. His release from Mountjoy Prison followed later in the same month.

Griffith accompanied De Valera to London in July, when the extended series of conferences were opened. Later, when the conferences shifted to different points, Griffith was appointed chairman of the Sinn Fein mission. He was in London through October, November and December, carrying on the negotiations which culminated on December 5 with the signing of the treaty between Great Britain and Ireland.

Listen! Flappers. Here's the Dope on Brains, Pep and Beauty Contest

Read Rules and Fill Out Questionnaire. Open to all Flaps at St. Margaret's Circus and Carnival, Next Week.

By THE FLAPPER

Lend an ear, flaps. Here's the rest of the dope on the brains, beauty and pep Flapper contest wo announced in yesterday's paper.

We're all set now an' rarin' to go.

We're going to find New England's brightest, prettiest and flappiest flapper if we hafta hire detektives to take up the trail. There is bound to be fame in it for the winner. Everybody will want to see the "ideal flapper." Something important and wonderful is bound to happen to her, once we've found her.

You'll notice we put "brains" first. What the flapper packs under her bobbed or marcelled head is absolutely the first consideration in this contest.

USE YOUR OWN NOODLE.

Everybody knows flappers are easy to look at. What we expect to prove is that they're likewise brighter than new Lincoln pennies. That's why brains have gotta come first.

The important thing, then, it to fill out the accompanying questionnaire and send it or bring it to the Boston American Flapper. Answer the questions all by yourselves, and just pretend you're taking an examination. Only don't answer the questions the way you would school questions. Remember the answers are not in any book, you've just simply got to think them up in your own little noodles.

Don't be afraid to say what really comes into your head. Don't try to guess the answer—this isn't a guessing contest. The old bean, flaps! It is a very fine piece of machinery and ought to be given a chance.

Neatness counts some also and to the point. Number the answers plainly.

BUTTONS FOR FLAPPERS.

Sending in a completely answered questionnaire automatically enrolls you in the Society of Amalgamated Flappers. Every entrant will receive an emblem bearing the flapper insignia.

You gotta have one of these buttons, flaps. They're the cat's whiskers. No flapper coat lapel will look right without one.

And now for the prize. Read the questionnaire over carefully and you'll know all about the prize. What could be fairer than that?

CONTEST RULES.

OPEN TO ANY NEW ENGLAND FLAPPER.

1. Answer questionnaire carefully, numbering answers and writing with ink or typewriter on one side of the paper.

2. Enclose self-addressed, stamped envelope.

3. Address Flapper, Boston American.

Use your own noodle.

PRIZES FOR WINNERS.

The Boston American Flapper will be at the Sheppard grounds, Massachusetts avenue, Dorchester, during the circus and carnival on Monday, to receive filled in questionnaires. Additional blanks will be furnished at the Flapper Booth. The questionnaires may be turned in any time during the week but must be mailed to the Boston American.

The circus committee has offered a special prize, a very snappy little two-seated coupe for the week's brightest and prettiest flapper, to be awarded at the Boston American Flapper on Saturday, August 19, from the questionnaires turned in at the Flapper Booth.

The winner of this contest, together with all others who enroll at the Flapper Booth, will be eligible for the Boston American's big prize to be selected later.

THE QUESTIONNAIRE.

There is no time limit on the big Flapper contest to find the ideal New England Flapper.

Here's the questionnaire:

Write your name, address and age in the right-hand corner of the paper on which you answer these questions.

1—Are the young women of today more self-reliant than those of past years?
A—If so, why?
B—If not, why?
2—What would you do if you found yourself in a strange town without money, not even enough to telephone home for funds?
3—If you were left alone in the world and had to make your own way tomorrow, how would you go about it?
4—What are you not afraid of?
5—What do you fear?
6—If a nicely dressed and handsome stranger drove up with a Rolls Royce and asked you to go for a ride, what would you do?
7—How much time does it take you to dress?
8—What do you read?
9—What would you do if you found yourself on a street car without money?
10—Do you wish you had been a boy, and if not, why?
11—If we must have dress reform, how should it be reformed?
12—Do you approve of the edict that considers rouge distasteful?
13—What is the difference between the slang of the flapper and the vulgar slang of the streets?
14—What would you do if a strange man attempted to pick an acquaintance with you on the street?
15—What is the attitude of a true flapper toward her father.
a—Her mother.
b—Her brother.
c—Her younger sister.
d—Her elder sister.
e—Her younger brother.
f—Her elder brother.
16—If you could have your own way how much time a day would you spend in:
a—Dress.
b—Thought.
c—Prayer.
d—Work.
e—Play.
17—What do you like to do most?
18—What do you want to be "when you get that way?
19—Are you a movie fan? How do you get htat you?
20—If you should win this contest what would you like for a prize.

INVENTOR GONE; WRECKS DEVICE

Despairing because an invention he had perfected had been turned down, Joseph F. Smith, a young South Boston man, has destroyed his work and run away from home, abandoning his wife and little boy.

Along with the invention are smashed the dreams of happiness and comforts of the little family. The distracted wife, unable to seek work, is forced to stay at the home at No. 190 West Eighth street and care for the child.

Smith had spent months perfecting his device, which was an automobile signal. He sent it to a nationally known manufacturer of automobile accessories, who reported unfavorably on it.

Mrs. Smith thinks her husband may have gone to Detroit in an attempt to interest Henry Ford.

USES RAZOR IN ROW OVER WOMAN

One man is in the Quincy Hospital and another in jail as the result of a fight in Quincy today, said to be over a woman.

Clifford Waddy, No. 19 Pine Grove road, and Joseph Caldwell, same address, both colored, became involved in a words argument. Finally, it is alleged, Waddy pulled a razor and slashed his opponent across the neck. Waddy fled, but was overtaken by Officer William Hibbard and placed under arrest. He is awaiting trial in the Superior Court for a similar offence committed several months ago.

SHOE AGREEMENT IN LYNN SPURNED

Lynn, Aug. 12.—The new working agreement for the shoe industry offered by the Mayor's arbitration board was today declared effective at once. The Joint Council, United Shoe Workers of America announced promptly that it rejected the agreement without reading it, on the grounds that the Mayor's committee was without authority to draw up such a document.

WOMAN'S LEG IS TORN OFF AS AUTO SKIDS

A seven passenger automobile in which ten persons were jamped, three in the front seats, skidded Minot street, West End, today, leaped a sidewalk and pinned Elizabeth Hannaburg, forty-five years old, of No. 45 Barton street, West End, against the building.

Her left leg was torn off and the toes on her right foot crushed.

At the Haymarket Relief Hospital it was necessary to amputate both leg and foot. She is not expected to live.

The automobile was driven by Mrs. Molly Cohen of No. 1067 Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester.

A warrant was sworn out for her arrest on a charge of operating an automobile without a driver's license and operating a machine in a manner to endanger lives. She swooned after the accident and was taken to her home.

Mrs. Hannaburg was on her way to buy her evening dinner when the car crashed her with terrific force into a building at No. 6 Minot street.

In the front seat with Mrs. Cohen was her husband, Frank R. Cohen, and Dr. William Dunphy. In the rear seats were Louis Needle, Max Harris, Benny Gordon, Jack Hankins and Sam Grover.

Fairchild Edward Dervan secured a warrant for Mrs. Cohen's arrest.

PLANS WEDDING, BUT ELOPES INSTEAD

No frills for beautiful June Shaner of New York and Nantucket. She was engaged to marry I. Hosford Brackett. They were to have been wed next month with all the frills that go with a society wedding. Today it was learned that June had dreaded those frills, so she and I. Hosford slipped away and got married. Then Dorothy Shaner broke the news to folks at Red Bank, N. J." said Mr. Brackett, "we decided it would be more fun to elope." So the quiet Tuesday bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Baldwin Shaner of No. 17 West Fifty-seventh street, New York.

MOVIE STAR HAS TO GIVE UP BOY

New York, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Edith C. Dillon, movie star, author and stage star, who with the aid of a number of friends add a fleet of motor cars, rescued her son, Lawrence Weber, Jr., six, while under the care of its nurse in Central Park last Thursday, was ordered by Supreme Court Justice Nott to return the boy to her husband, John D. Dillon, motion picture director. The custody battle over the child is the second effected by Mrs. Dillon, it was said. The first time she fled with the child to California.

benefit. They run the unions, tie up the railroads and the mines when they want to.

That, of course, is poetry. Capitalists sometimes bribe labor leaders, unfortunately; they always have spies in their ranks, but that is business, not ownership.

Henry Ford says the capitalists organize labor unions because it is much easier to do business with labor organizations than with employes. Perhaps there is some truth in Quincy today, said to be over a woman.

Clifford Waddy, No. 19 Pine Grove road, and Joseph Caldwell, same address, both colored, became involved in a words argument. Experiments with flying machines that have no motors are called "useless" on the ground that a gilding plane with no engine will never be useful. The assumption is false. McCORMICK'S EX-WIFE IS TO MARRY YOUNG SWISS ARCHITECT

ROMANCE OF JUNG COLONY

Rockefeller's Daughter Must Wait Till February for Illinois Law

(Copyright, 1922, by Evening American Publishing Co. and Cosmopolitan News Service.) (Reproduction Prohibited.)

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick will marry Edward Krenn, twenty-eight-year-old Swiss architect and landscape gardener, in February.

Mr. Krenn came to the United States on the same boat as Mrs. McCormick and has been living at the Drake Hotel. Mr. Krenn has been associated with Mrs. McCormick for several years.

They met during Mrs. McCormick's early association with Dr. Jung's colony in Zurich, Switzerland. Their chance acquaintance ripened into the closer bond during the intervening years.

When she came to this country, Mrs. McCormick brought the young architect over and set him to work on plans for the extensive zoological gardens she has donated to Cook County and which are to be located in the forest preserve.

Lately Mr. Krenn has been supervising the remodelling of the magnificent McCormick home in Lake Forest, which is being transformed from a place of residence to a lecture hall for the promulgation of Mrs. McCormick's psychological theories.

TO STAY IN CHICAGO.

Unlike her husband, Harold F. McCormick, who married Ganna Walska, the famous Polish almost-opera singer in Paris, Mrs. McCormick plans to continue a residence in this city and has set her wedding date to conform to the laws of the State forbidding the remarriage of divorced persons within a year after the signing of the separation decree.

This information came from an authoritative source close to the councils involving both side of the dividend home of McCormick.

From the same source it became known the marriage of Miss Mathilde McCormick, daughter of Harold McCormick, to Max Oser, Swiss riding master, would take place within a few days. It was because of the imminence of Mathilde's nuptials that her father hastened his return to Europe in order that he and his bride might witness his daughter's wedding.

SURPRISED BY NEWS.

The explanation of her father's haste was advanced by Muriel McCormick, the elder daughter of the family, who was unprepared for the news and who had expected his marriage would take place late in September.

Shocked by the cabled story of the wedding, Muriel broke into reminiscences of life as it once had been in their family.

"The marriage of my father and mother was a true love match. I know that. No other consideration entered their union, and we children were once so gloriously happy with them.

"Now," she sighed, as a flood of grief overcame her. "Now—Mrs. Harold McCormick," she murmured bitterly—repeating a dispatch. "To think another woman should wear my mother's name."

The acquisition of a step-mother will rest more irksomely on Muriel than on either of the other children. She will close the ancestral McCormick mansion and on the limited income at her disposal will take a small apartment and continue her musical studies.

She will also give close attention to the shop she is opening September 15 in the old Hand Box at No. 72 Oak street, hoping in this enterprise to restore her fortune.

'Oh, Lord!' Is Cry of Muriel When Told of Bridal

Chicago, Aug. 12.—When Muriel McCormick was asked what she thought of her father's marriage to Ganna Walska, she exclaimed excitedly:

"What did you say? My father married to Walska?"

When assured that dispatches to that effect had reached here, she ejaculated feelingly:

"Oh, Lord!"

HERE'S HOW DAN CUPID 'GOT' McCORMICK

With the marriage of Harold F. McCormick and Mme. Ganna Walska today, Universal Service became privileged to present the real story of the love match between McCormick and Mme. Ganna Walska, as told by McCormick himself.

Narrated by its principal figure, it is a story of a man of great wealth, swayed by love, who gave up one of America's industrial positions, and stripped himself of a large part of his huge fortune in order to make a new marriage with the woman of his choice.

By JOHN K. WINKLER,
Copyright, 1922, by Universal Service.

New York, Aug. 12.—On a golden Summer afternoon recently, a man of middle age, ruddy, sturdy, humor and good will overwhelming the occasional perplexed look in his light colored eyes, sat in a secluded corner of the St. Regis Hotel and told me the story of his romance with Ganna Walska Cochran, perhaps the most widely advertised woman in the world.

The man was Harold F. McCormick, former president of the International Harvester Company and son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller. With his simple directness of a child he said: "Mme. Walska is the only woman in the world for me. She loves me deeply as I love her. My marriage to Mrs. McCormick was a love match, pure and simple. Both of us were then in our twenties. Now we have been separated irrevocably.

"Mme. Walska, who married Alex. Cochran almost through an accident, also soon will be free to marry me."

MET BY CHANCE."

Mr. McCormick revealed how chance dictated his acquaintance with Walska and how indirectly he was responsible for her courtship by Cochran. He explained:

"In the early Summer of 1920 I was at the Plaza intending to sail for Europe shortly. One afternoon a telephone call came to me. A woman's voice, a voice of glorious timbre and beauty, spoke my name.

"My caller was Mrs. Ganna Walska Fraenkel, widow of Dr. Fraenkel, who had died a short time before. She told me she was a singer and had heard of my connection with the Chicago Opera Company. She said it was the ambition of her life to do something on the operatic stage. Would I give her a chance?

"I told her in my experience of many, many years with the Chicago Opera Company I had never been asked a favor of this sort. Nevertheless, I was so touched with the sincerity of her apparent ambition that I arranged a meeting.

"From that meeting began my acquaintance with the woman I determined to make my wife. I found that she was not only beautiful and talented, but possessed spiritual qualities such as I had never before recognized in any human being.

GAVE HER A CHANCE.

"Then and there I decided to break my rule: to give this beautiful young woman the opportunity she craved. She sang for me and for others in whom I had confidence. Her notes were pure and beautiful. Events since her marriage to Cochran have caused faulty upper register notes, due to her extreme nervousness, but European teachers have wrought wonders.

"Now I am certain she will become one of the greatest divas in the history of the operatic stage. If we are ever married, it will be the ambition of my life to see her recognized as the greatest woman singer in the world.

"Look here!" He drew the photograph of a slender, blonde woman, with wide eyes and swanlike neck, from an inner pocket. "Have you ever seen a countenance so sublime with divinity as this? She is the most marvelous woman that ever lived!

"Her marriage to Cochran was an accident—an accident due to the fact that he sailed on the Aquitania in July, 1920. Mrs. Fraenkel, who was very lonely and very sad, sailed also on this ship. I was also a passenger.

"The first day out I introduced them. From that moment I saw that Cochran was fascinated. I was even then in love with Mme. Walska, but I throttled by feelings. Cochran, however, was free. He never pursued anyone as he did Mme. Walska.

FOLLOWED HER TO PARIS.

"She went to Paris. He followed. She went in the late Summer to Zurich. He followed. I met them there.

"Mrs. McCormick was also in Zurich. I saw a great deal of Mme. Walska, but Cochran saw her also. I was called away on business and Cochran's friendship developed rapidly into ardent courtship.

"However, I had given my pledge to Mme. Walska to give her the opportunity she craved to sing grand opera. So the following season I broke my life long rule and she was given her opportunity to sing "Zaza" in Chicago.

"She did not sing 'Zaza.' Many elements entered into the situation.

"Mme. Walska and I had two the real problems—her divorce and mine. Her divorce was arranged rather easily but mine was more difficult.

"I married into a family that dislikes divorce. My father-in-law, Mr. Rockefeller, is very much opposed to divorce.

BEGGED FOR DIVORCE.

"Time after time, directly and indirectly, I begged her for a divorce. I could get no answer other than the suggestion that she would pursue her own course in life and I could do likewise.

"Finally I obtained the advice of Paul Cravath of New York, Clarence Darrow of Chicago and other attorneys.

"Finally, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and E. Parmalee Prentice, brother and brother-in-law respectively of Mrs. McCormick, went to Chicago.

"They held a brief but vigorous conference with Mrs. McCormick. Results were swift. Mrs. McCormick consented to retain an attorney, former Judge Cutting.

"A few days later, on December 28, 1921, she took the stand in Judge MacDonald's courtroom, told a formal story of desertion, and within fifty minutes the marital bonds were severed."

Heiress With Oser in Switzerland

Paris, Aug. 12.—That Mathilde McCormick, American heiress, may follow the example of her father and marry secretly, is declared by those in the know of the fashionable American colony here.

Miss McCormick is now in Switzerland, among the romantic mountains there, completing her own romance with Max Oser, the Swiss riding master. The young heiress, who is in Geneva, knew nothing of her father's marriage on Friday until she was notified by telegraph. She received the message while dining with Oser.

Meanwhile, ecstatically happy, the former Ganna Walska Cochran declared regarding her marriage to Harold F. McCormick, the American Harvester millionaire:

"This is the happiest day of my life. Harold is a wonderful man, typifying ideal Americanism. He is not jealous of my career, realizing that woman must have her own interests in order to bring to the home the real atmosphere of home life.

3 GIRLS STEAL $77, CAPTURED IN BOSTON

Three young Bangor girls arrived in Boston today, runaways from home.

They were small and young, but that was about the only thing that distinguished them from grownups who had been around the world.

The travellers were: Rose Corey, fourteen years old; Amelia Marcone, thirteen, and Elizabeth Lee, twelve. They left home yesterday and the Bangor authorities traced them to the waterfront. Suspecting that they were aboard the boat bound for Boston, word was sent to the Boston police.

Sergeant William Flynn boarded the boat as it docked at Boston today and he had not far to go. Deshod up in a steamer chair, unmindful of what was transpiring around, was the Corey girl, deeply engrossed in "The Hidden Terror or "The Freemason's Daughter."

"Aw, gee, you butted in just at the important part," was her complaint as the stalwart officer dug her out of the chair. The other two were nearby.

It later developed that Miss Lee appropriated $77 from her mother's store and this financed the trip. Miss Corey, by virtue of her age and size, was appointed treasurer and she bought the tickets.

The Method of Big Auto Dealers

Dealers in new or used automobiles or automobile supplies who are best known, and who transact the most business, are those who advertise regularly.

The business that wanders into your doors—no matter where you're located—is not enough.

You must attract buyers by telling a large number of people what you have for sale.

The Boston American is a recognized automobile medium. It is read by those who have the means to satisfy their desires.

In the Want Ad pages there is an "Automobile Exchange" classification which secures wide reading because of the rare bargains offered.

Live dealers in automobiles and auto supplies are represented in this live market daily.

MOTHER AND CHILD SWEPT OUT TO SEA

The wife and son of Dr. Kemp of Boston were blown out to sea with two other passengers when the ferry launch which plies between Pemberton and Paddock's Island became disabled and was blown through Hull Gut to the ocean.

Frantic with fear, the woman and boy hung to the sides of the launch, drenched with spray. They were numb with cold and on the verge of collapse when picked up by an ocean going tug.

For hours the little party, with a new skipper, was blown about in the freezing night until finally a tug belonging to the Packard Dredging Company of Providence with a string of mud laden scows bound for ocean dumping grounds steamed along side and shouted relief.

"What's the trouble?"

"Woman and child aboard, numb with cold," was the answer.

"All right, we'll come alongside."

Mrs. Kemp and her son were taken over the side and an engineer sent to repair the launch. The woman and boy were wrapped in blankets, given hot drinks and shown to a cabin.

"We have to go to sea first," said the skipper. "I'll drop you off on the way back."

Glad of the warmth of the big tug, Mrs. Kemp assented.

Life-savers from the Stony Beach station arrived and took the ferry in tow. The men passengers stayed aboard.

Then to Pemberton came Dr. Kemp from Boston to learn that his wife and son had been swept to sea. Half-crazed with fear, he hired a motor boat and with friends in other boats passed out through the gut.

All night long they searched the waters with no sign of the boat, having in some manner missed the life-saving crew as they returned.

At 7 this morning, tired and forlorn, the troop of boats reached Pemberton to find the big ocean-going tug tied up at the pier and Mrs. Kemp and sonny Kemp ashore and comfortable.

NEAR RAILWAY TIE-UP IN WEST

strike duty at former trouble centres.

Southern Pacific firemen joined the walkout, tying up limited passenger trains at Ogden, Utah.

Trainmen in the Santa Fe walkout have been ordered back to work by the brotherhoods.

Early today the trainmen's strike had spread until it affected among other roads the Illinois Central at Memphis, the Louisville and Nashville at Evansville, Ind., and Madisonville, Ky., the Denver and Rio Grande, the Wabash at Moberly, Mo., the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line at Pocatello, Idaho, and Salt Lake City and the Missouri, Kansas and Texas.

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—California fruit growers today faced the most serious situation in their history as a result of the walkout of the "Big Four" brotherhood men. The Santa Fe Railroad, whose eastern outlet was cut off by the walkout of enginemen, firemen and conductors at Needles, Cal., and Arizona points, today had placed embargoes on all perishables and was accepting other freight only subject to delay. The Santa Fe was selling no tickets East and was routing all who held tickets over their lines via other roads, paying whatever difference was necessary to carry out the transfer.

Entire Rail Strike Back to Harding

Washington, Aug. 12.—The entire transportation system of the nation was being slowly undermined today as the railroad strike moved back toward the White House for solution.

Reports from all over the country, coming to government officials as well as to labor leaders, meeting in Washington, indicated the sporadic spread of the individual or voluntary strike on the part of train crews identified with the Big Four Brotherhoods, and the continued interruption of train movements.

While a committee representing the railway executives was understood to be en route to Washington today with a conditional acceptance of President Harding's latest settlement program, the heads of the sixteen standard railroad unions went back into conference here to put into final form their rejection of the same proposition.

The conditional acceptance by the railway executives, reported from New York, will be offset and nullified by the rejection of the unions, and the whole problem will be thrown back into President Harding's hands perhaps before nightfall.

President Harding made engagements today to receive a delegation of the striking shopmen at 2.30 p. m. and a committee of the railway executives at 4.30 p. m.

There will be no immediate drastic move on the part of the government, according to all indications today.

SAYS BROTHER WAS NOT PAL OF 'PRINCE'

And yet another role for that protean among confidence men, Harold Schwarm, royal chef, scullion prince and the last of the Bourbons!

This time hectic Harold, who deserted his Boston wives, is revealed to the sheepish scores who took him at his uniform value as a Shiek without a Tent.

Did the taking on of four wives dampen the Papier Mache Prince's ardor for further conquest?

Letters found today indicate that it did not. They show that he outrudolfed Valentino, outnatted Goodwin and outdewolfed Hopper. His affairs of the heart took in young girls as well as matrons, shop girls and college women.

Had this romeo and asp and were he of the other sex he would be the modern Cleopatra.

Among the signatures signed to the love missives are Molly O, Claire, Princess Tien-Tao and Lillian.

Letters on pink stationery, on blue, on mauve—these tender missives filled the Prince's files.

At Pawtucket, R. I., it was made known today that Harry Hocking was not the confederate of Schwarm. Walter Hocking, Harry's brother, made this assertion.

"I believe that Harry's suitcase was stolen and that is how the letter which I wrote my brother while he was in England came into Schwarm's possession," Walter declared to an American reporter.

Included among the effects of the prince of bigamists were letters to Harry Hocking and also his discharge from the British Navy and a British passport. Walter Hocking was given the first news of his brother's connection with the famed bogus prince when a representative of the Boston American visited him.

BOSWORTH BURNED WHEN IRON SLIPS

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—Herbert Bosworth, strong man of the movies, stripped to the waist and acting a stoke hole part in a film, was badly burned about the hands and wrists today.

Herbert Bosworth.

He was being filmed at his studio in San Mateo. Taken to a hospital it was said his condition is not critical. Bosworth was pictured with rope-bound hands. He was to effect his release by burning the rope with a red-hot iron. The iron slipped.

WOMAN LEAPS 17 STORIES TO DEATH

New York, Aug. 12.—Pailing in her efforts to obtain solace from the grief which had overtaken her following the death of her husband, Mrs. Bessie Mae Lowy, twenty-four, leaped seventeen stories to her death from the Broadway side of the Flat Iron Building.

Mrs. Lowy had gone to the building to attend a Christian Science instruction class on the seventeenth floor. Leaving her books on her desk, she slipped to a window and unnoticed by those in the room, climbed out, closed the window and jumped.

MARSHAL INJURED IN R. R. YARD BOMBING

Roseville, Cal., Aug 12 (By International News Service).—Special Deputy U. S. Marshal J. P. Sullivan was wounded, windows of the Southern Pacific roundhouse here were shattered and a portion of the stockade surrounding the yard torn down when five bombs exploded simultaneously here today. Sullivan was wounded in the mouth by gunshot when the bombs were hurled from the explosions. According to the Deputy United States marshal in charge, two of the bombs were hurled from automobiles and two others by persons standing outside the stockade.

BOSTON SHIP IS WRECKED IN JERSEY

The Boston steamer Mohawk is a total wreck off the Jersey shores opposite Staten Island. Word to this effect was received by the owners, the Burton Steamship Company of Commercial Wharf. The Mohawk left Boston on Monday. It carried no cargo at the time it ran on the rocks. Captain Henry K. Deane of Boston and the crew of eighteen are safe.

$500,000 FIRE ON PIER IN NEW YORK

New York, Aug. 12.—Damage estimated by New York Central officials at $500,000 was wrought by fire which partly destroyed Pier D on the North river front in the Central's West 65th street freight yards today.

Four city firehouts, a score of railroad tugs and all available land apparatus in the vicinity was called out to fight the fire, which raged fiercely for more than three hours.

A dozen firemen were overcome by dense smoke thrown off by the varnished contents of the blazing warehouse, and one fireman was painfully burned by the wet jims which was splashed on his face and hands.

Railroad workers ran an engine through the flames and saved a train of 21 freight cars laden with jute, cloth, grease, meat and other commodities.

Acting Governor Takes Job as Strike Guard

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 12 (By Associated Press). — Pelham A. Barrows, Lieutenant-Governor of Nebraska, and for the past week acting chief executive during the absence of Governor McKelvie, also is working as a $6-a-day strike guard for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

"Being Lieutenant-Governor has honor but no remuneration," he said, adding that he took the new work when he and Mrs. Barrows found "we had $3.40 in the bank and I had $1.60 in my pocket, with not another cent in the world."

PONZI DEPOSIT SUIT IS WON BY BANK

Manchester, N. H., Aug. 12.—Justice George F. Morris of the United States Circuit Court has handed down a decision in favor of the Merchants' National Bank of this city.

The Ponzi trustees of Boston had intended that a large sum of money which Ponzi had deposited in the Manchester bank, should have been turned over to the trustees in the process of settlement of the troubles following the operations of Ponzi.

In hearing was held here last March, the defense alleging that the money was deposited by Ponzi under stipulations that it should be paid a New Hampshire investors when properly endorsed by Ponzi's agents.

QUINCY SAFE IS ROBBED OF $1000 IN CASH

Thieves, apparently acquainted with the inside workings of the office, entered the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company office at Quincy and stole $1,000 from the office safe.

Officials of the company say that the safe was opened by use of the combination, and that the inside door of the safe was opened by a duplicate key. An investigation is being made by the police.

Miss Alice McGinty of Quincy, cashier at the branch office, was questioned by the police this morning. She said she closed the door to the safe last night at 5:30 o'clock, and is sure she locked it.

London Weddings Draw Social Interest of America, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE most brilliant court season since the war has just drawn to a close. It has drawn the attention of the whole world, for the splendor was quite as dazzling as in pre-war days. The season ended with two large weddings, one of especial note to us on this side.

The highest circles of society attended the wedding of Miss Catharine Wendell, an American girl, to Lord Porchester, Earl of Carnarvon, whose great-grandfather, Major-General William Herbert, son of the eighth Earl of Pembroke, was raised to the peerage in 1795 as Baron Porchester.

The two most noted guests at the assembly were the Prince of Wales and Lord Mountbatten, whose wedding was the second one of great interest. He married Miss Edwina Ashley, the wealthiest girl in Great Britain, in the presence of the whole royal family, the Prince of Wales being the best man. The four daughters of the Princess of Greece, sister of Lord Mountbatten, were bridesmaids.

The final event of the season ham Palace, attended by about 10,000 guests, among them many leading Americans, who are numbered in London society. Members of the royal family, including Princess Mary and Viscount Lascelles, moved through the grounds, conversing with the guests.

A prominent American girl, who came out this season in London, was Miss Margery Glasgow, daughter of Mrs. Arthur Glasgow. They have given up their home in Berkeley square for one in Ennismore Gardens. Here they have room to display to advantage their collection of beautiful tapestries and rather wonderful furniture, which they purchased in Italy. Miss Glasgow, who has impressed London society with her cleverness, is tall and rather dark.

Now society has scattered to its large estates or to the watering places. Many American visitors, however, are taking great interest in the racing events at Goodwood Park on the Sussex Downs. Marshall Field of Chicago had a very successful day there this week when he had two winners out of three horses entered, his Golden Corn losing the King George Stakes by a small margin, much to the disappointment of the crowd.

The King and Queen were present, apparently enjoying the racing to the full. In the paddock the dressing was very elaborate, women in rich gowns covered by furs, but for the most part were seen the country ladies in tweeds and the country gentlemen in homespun.

London is still full of American visitors, and all the theaters and places of amusement are in full swing. Registered at the Berkeley Hotel there, from Boston, are Mrs. Oscar Iasigi, Miss Virginia Baker, Mrs. William D. Hunt and her daughter, Miss Rosamond Hunt.

MRS. CLARENCE FISKE and Miss Barbara Fiske, formerly of No. 114 Brattle street, Cambridge, sailed for Europe the latter part of May. John Fiske, the son of the house, took his other two sisters over after he had finished his studies at Tech in June to join his mother and sister. These two are Miss Margaret Fiske and Miss Dorothy Fiske, the latter a debutante of Winter before last and now a student in Bryn Mawr. The Fiske home in Cambridge was taken last Winter by the John H. Storers. The Fiskes plan to make their home in the future with Mrs. Fiske's mother, Mrs. Higginson, at No. 126 East Thirty-fourth street, New York.

MRS. FREDERICK H. PRINCE, JR., of Prides Crossing, is just now on a visit to New York, where she is at the Ambassador Hotel. Of course, everyone surmises that she is there with the definite purpose of helping to buy the trousseau for her sister, Miss Alice Harding, who is to marry Robert Pell of Southampton, L. I., on September 7 at the Pride's Crossing home of Mrs. Prince.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eliot Ware, Jr. (Elizabeth Clarke), of No. 49 Brimmer street, Boston, are also stopping at the Ambassador for a few days.

YESTERDAY society along the North Shore gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears in Beverly Cove for the lecture, "My Adventures in America," by Guy Envin, the blind French soldier. Viscount de Fontenilliat of Milton introduced the speaker. Last week this gallant Frenchman spoke at the home of the Godfrey L. Cabots in Beverly Farms on "The Master of Pain." He was introduced by Dr. William Roscoe Thayer.

Among the prominent ones present were Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. M. Graeme Haughton, Mrs. Warren Sturgis, Mrs. Thomas Stevenson, Mrs. J. Henry Lancashire and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Umberto Coletti, Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. Robert Sampson, Mrs. Allen Curtis and Mrs. A. Boynton Glidden.

TODAY is the day for the annual fair for the benefit of Christ Church, Hamilton, which will be held on the Randolph Dodge estate in that town. Mrs. Charles F. Ayer is in charge. Tea is to be served, and there will be music nad dancing. Another feature will be the whippet races, conducted by Bayard Warren and Bayard Tuckerman, Jr.

Come Through, Destroyed by Fire, Revived

In 1917, when Director Jack Conway supervised the filming of "Come Through" starring Herbert Rawlinson, the country was in the throes of war fever. The public was not interested to any great extent in the movies at that time and much less in the story of a master crook. Still "Come Through" came through big at the box office and was decided success. Then came the great New York warehouse fire in which the original negative of the Rawlinson starring vehicle was destroyed, and no steps for refilming the picture were taken owing to the excitement of war days. Now, five years after its first appearance, a new version of "Come Through" has been produced under the title of "Don't Shoot," featuring the same star and directed by the same Jack Conway, the combination that made the picture a box office bet in 1917. It will be shown at the Orpheum Theatre the last three days of the coming week. Millionaires' mansions in fashionable Pasadena, Cal., prominent banks in the financial district of Los Angeles, exclusive shops and restaurants, furnished some of the backgrounds used in the latest Rawlinson vehicle. No expense was spared to make the picture a typical 1922 production. The original story was written by Georgs Bronson Howard and adapted to the screen by George Hivley.

WALTER SCANLAN

The attraction to open the season at the Plymouth Theatre beginning Monday evening, August 21st, will be Walter Scanlan, the popular Irish singing star and actor, in 'Maytime in Erin,' from the pen of the gifted author Edward E. Rose, who wrote "The Rosary." That itself should commend it to the lovers of clean, wholesome drama, and Manager Gatts is said to have given the play a production of rare beauty, and surrounded his young star with an exceptionally high class cast. It is promised that Mr. Scanlan has a role really suited for the display of his histronic talent.

NORUMBEGA OFFERS NEW REVUE

An unusual medley of songs, dances, pantomime, monologue and nonsense is embodied in the entertainment provided by Hoyt's Musical Revue, which has been retained for a second week by the management of Norumbega Park. None of the Summer parks' shows seen this season presents such an array of dancers and comedians, the latter being headed by Lew Brems, famous as a portrayer of Hebrew characters. Felix Martin runs him a close second with his Irish impersonations and the rest of the capable company, both principals and chorus, do their part toward providing excellent Summer entertainment. Two shows will be given next week, the bill being changed on Thursday.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

A romantic comedy-drama featuring two of the most popular photoplay stars of the cinema art, is the principal offering at Loew's Orpheum Theatre for the initial half of the coming week. "Her Majesty" with Mollie King and Creighton Hale, is a story built around a merry mixup of twin sisters. One twin is a pampered and petted snob, the other, sweet and unspoiled and loved by all as "Her Majesty." The vaudeville bill is worthy an all-star show and is headed by Charles Mack & Company in a character comedy offering "A Friendly Call." Others of equal merit are Walsh, Reed & Walsh, a triple concoction of melodies and harmony; Florence Perry, Nick & Gladys; and Frear, Baggett & Frear. A late comedy and Pathe News will also feature the bill. For the second half of the week Herbert Rawlinson, in "Don't Shoot," a story by George Bronson Howard, will be the feature photoplay.

ADDISON PITT AT ST. JAMES

The arrival of Mr. Addison Pitt from the Coast this past week marks the beginning of renewed activities at the St. James Theatre preparatory to the opening of the Boston Stock Company Monday night, August 28th, for its second season.

Managing Director George A. Giles has a right to feel that the coming of Mr. Pitt means much in the future development of his stock efforts in Boston. It is to say the least, tying the "old" to the "new," for it was Addison Pitt's father, Mr. Henry M. Pitt, who so many years directed the famous old Boston Museum Players who made for themselves a world-wide reputation.

CRIPPLED SOLDIER OUTING

One of the merriest Nantasket excursions of the year will be held next Tuesday when more than 400 wounded and sick war veterans from the Parker Hill and West Roxbury hospitals will be the guests of Frederic L. Lane, general manager and treasurer of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, on a trip down the harbor to Nantasket Beach and return.

The wounded and sick war heroes will be given the use of one of the vessels in the fleet of Nantasket boats and special provisions have been made for their comfort and enjoyment. Officers and members of Roxbury Post, No. 44, American Legion, will have charge of the transportation and entertainment of the veterans.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ. THEATRE

Sir Rudyard Kipling's theory that "East is east and west is west" is applied to an American problem in a manner teeming with interest in "The Half Breed" the first National attraction that opens a run at Gordon's Central Sq. Theatre next Monday. The picture is the first venture in the film field of Oliver Morosco, for years a leading figure in the realm of theatrical production, whose latest and perhaps greatest success is "The Bat."

NANTASKET BOATS

Nantasket Beach, with its great number of amusement attractions and its splendid bathing beach continues to attract many thousands of persons, and the great majority of these find that the pleasantest and most convenient way to reach the beach is on the vessels of the Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company.

GAYETY THEATRE

The burlesque season of 1922-1923 will be ushered in in Boston Monday, August 27, with the presentation at the Gaiety Theatre of the Greenwich Village Revue, an elaborate attraction that is crowded with music, fun, dazzling dancing numbers, and is gorgeously staged.

HELEN OF TROY IS DISCOVERED IN BOSTON

Great archaeological discovery.

Authenticated portrait of Helen of Troy. Printed herewith for the first time.

Helen Ford

All through the ages people have been wondering what two ladies who raised cain in their day really looked like, Cleopatra and Helen. And now along comes a simple dramatic critic and gets a picture of one of them by the easy process of asking for it.

Helen of Troy is appearing in "Love and Kisses." This sticky title is liable to be changed to something more in keeping with the entertainment by next week, but Helen will still be down on the program as the prima donna and her full name is Helen Ford of Troy, New York.

"How are all the Greeks?" I asked her.

"Oh, I've stopped eating in Greek restaurants since I became a prima donna."

"I was referring to Achilles and Ajax."

"Oh, you mean that Siege of Troy stuff," laughed Miss Ford. "They are always calling me Helen of Troy, but I am ashamed to say I haven't had time to read about it yet."

"What sort of place is Troy, New York?"

"Oh, it's all right. One of those towns you are born in and get away from as soon as you can toddle."

SHE ELOPED.

"How did you escape?"

Miss Ford giggled. "I eloped with an actor. Doesn't that sound like a dime novel."

"Was he a good actor?"

"Well, he married the girl. George, that's my husband, was managing a stock company in Troy and I was a matinee girl. My folks didn't want me to marry anybody in the show business, so one dark and stormy night we went away from that place together."

"And how did the romance end."

"It didn't end. It's going on yet."

And then I remembered that Miss Ford was the bride of George Ford who managed "The Man Who Came Back" in Boston several seasons ago, and that the fashioning little prima donna of "Love and Kisses" was the "unseen voice" singing from the wings in the cabaret scene. Which only goes to show that the folks who saw "The Man Who Came Back" got cheated. Miss Ford should have been seen.

Miss Caine Now an Aunt Instead of a Mother

Georgia Caine has stopped playing mothers and in "Little Nellie Kelley" is appearing as an aunt. In "Mary" and the "O Boy!" GIrl you will remember trat Miss Caine played mother parts. She started a new style in stage mothers, the dancing, singing mother.

It is a funny thing but the stage was about the last institution to discover that the old fashioned mother had gone out. The present crop of grandmothers dye their hair wear short skirts—or did—and smoke cigarettes. They can out-dance their granddaughters and they cut their daughters out with their beauty.

Meanwhile the stage mothers were exceedingly stately, very dignified and wandering around expressing horror at the idea of the young girls checking corsets at a dance.

But Georgia Caine and George Cohan set the stage right on these matters and now there are few musical shows in which the heroine's mother can not step it out or sing song with the best of them.

Edith Spencer Started Her Imitations in School

Edith Spencer, whose gifts as a comedienne are one of the features of "Shuffle Along," the strictly colored entertainment at the Selwyn has been a mimic ever since her school days. When she read her lessons in school she had a faculty of making the other kids laugh without doing anything exactly for which she could be punished. Two of her favorite recitations were "If Little Birdie" from Appleton's Second Reader and the famous school song "Baby-Bye, Here's a Fly." She began her professional career singing in concert and later in vaudeville she made her first big hit.

The Future of the Jewett Players

The Copley Theatre has been torn down, and the Henry Jewett Players are without a home at present. Unlike most ousted stock companies, there is said to be a fund raised by the Jewett Repertory Club amounting to nearly $40 000 to help build a theatre in Boston to perpetuate the Jewett contribution to the stage.

That such a fund could be collected in an American city is really a reflection upon the taste and patriotism of the people who contributed it, because Jewett's troupe is not an American company but an English company, his productions are English productions and their value in developing the American theatre amounts to nothing.

There is need of an endowed theatre in this country, but it should not be a theatre whose actors are prevented by their adenoids from giving a proper performance of an American play.

Going to Have a Russian Robin Hood

Douglas Fairbanks has engaged a Russian composer named Boris Dunaw to write a musical score for "Robin Hood" which is to be his next feature film. "Good heavens with De Koven's marvelous Robin Hood score at hand bubbling with the most exquisite, effervescent evergreen airs ever composed Doug has to hire a Russian who probably thinks Robin was a bird instead of a burglar.

Where Do Girls Go After College?

What becomes of college girls? It depends in what part of the country the question is asked just what the answer will be. If the question were asked by an inquiring reporter in Hollywood, the reply would probably be, they try for the movies. There are certainly a large number of college graduates among the girls working in the motion picture studios of the West. In the Alice Calhoun production, "A Girl's Desire," all of the girls used in the boarding school scenes are college graduates. Most of these girls took academic courses. But one studied to become a physician, another took up dentistry and a third had ambitions to become a lawyer. Whatever caused them to go off at a tangent and become picture actresses is an unknown quantity. The lure of the screen was stronger than the call of a profession evidently, for the girls seem perfectly contented with their art and have no regrets for their choice. What is true of the girls is also true of boys. Around a studio may be found graduates from most of the principal colleges of the country. In a few years it may be as necessary to go to college to enter the film industry as it is to become a lawyer, doctor or other profession. The plot of "A Girl's Desire," which will be shown at Loew's State Theatre the coming week is a royal one. It is a comedy-drama that will appeal to all.

"The Dictator" Filled With Thrills and Excitement for Movie Fans

A picture filled with the thrills and excitement of a Latin-American revolution and one depicting the adventures of social climbers—are the offerings at Loew's State Theatre the coming week. The first of these is "The Dictator" with the ever popular Wallace Reid as the star. The scenes are located in South America and deal with a revolution in which Dr. Reid, as the hero, takes an active and ingliorious part, rises from stoker to commander and wins the heart of an excellent young woman played by Lila Lee. The accompanying picture is "A Girls' Desire" featuring Alice Calhoun. It is a story of a girl whose parents become rich and who is forced into a new environment so suddenly that she and her father find it difficult to become acclimated. There is much humor in the action. An excellent cast has been chosen for Miss Calhoun and embody some noted stage players admirably adapted for the comedy parts which enter into the picture.

WILBUR THEATRE

Although "Love and Kisses" came into Boston a week ago practically unknown, it is safe to say that the majority of local theatregoers are planning to see this delightful and refreshing musical comedy before the engagement at the Wilbur Theatre is finished.

JULIA SANDERSON

Julia Sanderson in Carle Carlton's Broadway record-breaking musical comedy success "Tangerine" is the lucky number drawn for Boston by the Shubert Theatre for its official opening this season on Monday, August 23.

FIREWORKS SPECTACLE RETURNS

"Scrapping the Navy" to Be Shown at Braves Field Next Wednesday Night

Franklin's feat of bringing down the lightning, probably the most ingenious piece of fireworks ever constructed will be one of the big features of the return engagement of "Scrapping the Navy" at Braves Field next Wednesday night.

The International Fireworks Company is not only bringing back the naval spectacle and other popular features of the fireworks display held at Braves Field in July, but is adding new marvels. The Franklin kite piece shows a large fireworks kite affixed to the top of the flagpole at Braves Field, with Franklin standing on the field. In a storm of thunderbolts, lightning is seen running down the string on the kite to the key in Franklin's hand.

"Fighting the Flames," "The Eruption of Mt. Vesuvius," a head-on collision between two railroad trains, Leonard-Tendler bout are other novelties which are on the bill. The fight feature is a comedy gem.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

As proof of the fact that Clyde H. McArdle, manager of the Somerville Players, proposes to give one of the best organizations in the history of the theatre, is evidenced in the announcement that he has engaged Harry Benham as leading man for the coming season. Mr. Benham is well know in Boston. His last appearance here was made in "Little Old New York" and prior to that appeared as the lead in "The Rainbow Girl."

REGRET!
In consequence of the large number of people turned away at every performance because of the unprecedented popularity of this musical comedy sensation, the management urges early reservations by those who anticipate seeing this remarkable production. The easiest and best way to thoroughly enjoy "SHUFFLE ALONG" is to procure your seats well in advance. Mail orders, as is the custom of the Selwyn Theatre, will be given prompt and accurate attention. Spare yourself the inconvenience of unnecessarily standing in line by purchasing your seats one or two weeks in advance. In this way you are enabled to get desired locations. "SHUFFLE ALONG" with and by MILLER and LYLES, and SISSLE and BLAKE, and the New York cast and production intact, is here for a limited time only and to miss seeing it is to deny yourself the treat of a lifetime.

ADRIATIC BLAST 'LIKE THUNDER,' SAYS GLYNN

New York, Aug. 12.—A wireless message from the Adriatic, received at the White Star Line offices today, said she would reach Ambrose Light, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The condition of one of the injured firemen was reported by the captain as very grave, but two others were improving.

New York, Aug. 12.—The White Star Liner Adriatic is expected to reach port tomorrow afternoon.

As soon as the big ship is in, an investigation will begin of the explosion in the No. 2 hold, which caused the death of five and injured four of the crew.

A graphic description of the accident in midsea was given by Martin H. Glynn, former Governor of New York, a passenger on the Adriatic. Mr. Glynn, who is a newspaperman, said:

"It came like a roar of thunder. "The captain of the ship, Hugh R. David, is a strict disciplinarian, and this showed when he performed great work. He had the fire in the hold under control and the ship again on her way a few hours after the explosion.

"The discipline and the courtesy of the officers was admirable.

"Members of the crew were true to the best tradition of English seamanship.

"The explosion and attendant flash awakened me. I landed on deck to find scores before me, and there we stayed until the sun came up. What we saw was compliment-ary to human nature.

"It was a tense time. There was a solemnity, a seriousness in the air, a quietness of speech, a hush of expectancy and a looking of death in the face. But no whimpering, no snivelling, no wailing, no word of complaint.

"At sunset, two of the victims, enshrouded in the union jack, were buried at sea. Passengers raised $7,000 to care for the families of the dead and injured."

Spontaneous combustion of the gases generated in the coal being carried for use on the return trip of the Adriatic was given as the cause of the blas.

BEFORE AND AFTER

EUGENE O'BRIEN

This is not an advertisement for a cure for baldness. It's the way Eugene O'Brien, film star whose curly locks have made many a flapper gasp and look love sick, looks now after his recent accident and before the crash. O'Brien's hair had to be shaved from his head because of scalp wounds. His condition is rapidly improving and soon the luxuriant hair will again flit into the films.

CLEAN UP RUM SELLERS AT PARKER HILL

Prohibition Enforcement Agent James P. Roberts went out today to clean up the bootleggers who sold poisoned rum to disabled soldiers at Parker Hill Hospital.

Spurred on by the death of the third veteran, killed by moonshine, Agent Roberts visited the hospital and prepared for raids.

The third veteran to die from moonshine at the hospital was Private Thomas McKenney of Charlestown. He had been unconscious for five days.

Just before his death McKenney rallied slightly. Physicians asked him where he had secured the liquor and he replied a man on the street had directed him to a drug store not far from the hospital. At this place, he said, he had bought a pint of liquor for $1.

He relapsed into unconsciousness and died before he could give the exact location. In the drug store, Roxbury Crossing police were notified.

20,000 ORANGEMEN TO CONVENE HERE

Among organizations that have been persuaded to come to Boston for their conventions, as the result of the activity of the Commercial and Industrial Bureau is the National body of Orangemen. They will hold their convention in Boston in 1924. The convention will bring more than 20,000 persons here.

ANOTHER AMERICAN BEAT

The Boston American—which prints the big news first—was the first paper in Boston to definitely announce the death total in the explosion on the liner Adriatic. Facsimiles show, above, YESTERDAY'S Boston American and below another Boston paper which trails along today. A mere matter of nearly 24 hours.

NEW YORK SOLOIST TO SING AT ST. PAUL'S

The tenor soloist of St. George's Church, New York city, George W. Bagdasarian, will sing "The Lord Is My Light" (by Speaks), at St. Paul's Cathedral tomorrow evening at 7:30. The subject of the address by the Rev. Edward T. Sullivan will be "Every Man His Own Victim."

The Summer choir of men and women will sing "How Lovely Is Thy Dwelling Place," from Brahm's beautiful "Requiem." The morning service at 11 o'clock will be broadcasted by the Shepard Stores radio station. The subject of the sermon will be "Healing the Wounds of Life." There will be two anthems, Tschaikowsky's "How Blest Are They" and Mendelssohn's "Be Not Afraid," from the "Elijah."

BOSTON BANKER IN SHIP FIRE ON LAKE

Glens Falls, N. Y., Aug. 12.—Governor Miller, Charles J. Peabody, Boston banker, and others aboard the steam launch Crusader, which took fire on Lake George, were at no time in danger. Only one member of the party strapped on a life preserver. That was a woman who said she had always been curious to see how they were worn and attached the belt more as a lark, than to safeguard her life.

The fire was said by members of the crew to have started from a coil of rope left lying against a smokestack. The blaze was extinguished before the boat docked.

Besides Governor Miller, the party included Mr. and Mrs. Sniffen and Miss Sniffen of Brooklyn, Mr. and Mrs. Speed of Louisville, Ky.; Charles J. Peabody of Hildeer, Peabody & Company of Boston, brother of Mrs. Sniffen; Adolph S. Ochs, of the New York Times; Frederick R. Richards of Glens Falls, secretary of the New York State Historical Association; Mrs. W. Harold Adamson, Joseph Cranson, and Dr. W. E. Cummings of Glens Falls. There were about twenty persons in the party.

Arabic Sails for U. S.

Advices from Naples today state that the White Star liner Arabic sailed from that port on the 9th for Boston, with fifty-eight saloon, 295 cabin and 464 steerage passengers. She will arrive at Boston about August 21.

Held as Slayer

SAMUEL D. STATZO.

Worcester, Aug. 12.—Samuel D. Statzo, thirty-two, of Newton, was held without bail in the Worcester district court for the murder of Antonio Mandisco, of Boston, who was shot in a duel over an unknown woman in Worcester.

100,000 TONS BRITISH COAL COMING HERE

The British steamship Raymon de Larinaga arrived in port today from Liverpool with 3,000 tons of British coal. Seven other big cargoes will arrive between now and Monday night and four other cargoes are on the way from British coal ports. More than 100,000 tons of British coal is either in port or destined here.

The New England Fuel & Transportation Company is maintaining a regular service between Boston and Cape Breton coal ports.

The British coal, for the most part, is for public service corporations.

The WEEK'S BUSINESS in NEW ENGLAND

INDUSTRIAL OUTLOOK BRIGHT

Many Plants Add to Equipment in Preparation for Big Trade

Even the growing realization of the serious consequences which will ensue, if the coal and railroad strikes are permitted to remain unsettled, has failed, as yet, to act as a noticeable check on business. Progress which is truly remarkable considering the difficulties in the way, continues to be made. Indications are not wanting that many keen business men are anticipating business in proportions far in excess of that enjoyed even during the boom years of 1919-1920.

The building industry continues to act as the main driving force for improved conditions. An examination of the building trade reports, however, shows many surprising features.

The reason for the great amount of residential building is apparent. It is the effect of an accumulated shortage. The same reason, to large extent, is true of the activity in office building and mercantile construction. Very little of it should be termed speculative.

Industrial building comes in a different class. Following the Armistice it was thought industry was overbuilt. The post-war boom taxed the capacity of all plants and much additional building was done. Then came the collapse, and it appeared as though present facilities would be ample to take care of requirements for years to come.

Yet these trade reports have for some time shown considerable activity in industrial building all over New England. For example:

IN MALDEN, the Yale Knitting Company, manufacturers of sweaters and knitted goods, are to erect at once an addition to their plant at Jackson and Sherman streets, at a cost of approximately $40,000. This will double the capacity of the present mill. Business in prospect sufficient to keep the enlarged plant busy for several months is given as the reason for the enlargement.

AT QUINCY, the Norfolk Varnish Company is to build a large brick addition to its plant to take care of increased business. The contract has already been awarded for the structure.

AT SPRINGFIELD, the Somers Creamery Company has let the contract for an addition to its milk station on Locust street at a cost of $20,000.

AT LACONIA, N. H., an addition to the plant of the Pitman Manufacturing Company is under construction. The building, which will be used as a dyehouse, will add 20,000 square feet of floor space to the plant.

AT NEW LONDON, CT., the New England Carpet Lining Company has awarded a contract for the erection of a one-story addition to their present plant. The new structure will be of brick and will be 30x100 feet. Work is to be started immediately.

AT PROVIDENCE, R. I., an addition to the plant of the Hope Webbing Company is now under construction.

AT PAWTUCKET, R. I., two local textile concerns are planning enlargements. J. & P. Coates, Inc., linen thread makers, will erect a two story addition, of brick, 44x72 feet. Part of the new structure will be used for office purposes. Plans for a filtration plant, it is understood, are under consideration.

The Lorraine Manufacturing Company also contemplates the erection of a new factory building on the parcel of land adjoining its plant, recently purchased from the Sayles Finishing Company. The building is expected to cover a large part of the tract, which contains nearly 200,000 square feet.

AT CHICOPEE the Palmer Steel Company of Holyoke plans to start work this month on a brick and steel plant, 200 by 80 feet, to cost $20,000.

The variety of industries represented in the above incomplete summary of industrial building activity is evidence that the feeling of optimism is widespread and not confined to any one locality or any particular line of business.

Expectation of far better times in the immediate future is the only logical reason which would compel such expansion.

Mill Plans Use of Water Power in Fuel Crisis

Salmon Falls, N. H., Aug. 12.—The impending shortage of coal has caused the Salmon Falls Manufacturing Co. to have plans prepared for an auxiliary water power plant at its mills here. It is proposed to erect a building about 30x80 feet and to install turbines for generation of current for the motors. Complete details of the project have not been worked out. Charles T. Mann of No. 200 Devonshire street, Boston, is drawing the plans and specifications.

BIG DEMAND FOR TYPEWRITERS

"Better general business conditions," is the reason attributed by the Gill Rebuilt Typewriter Co., of 212 Summer street, for the great progress which this concern has made in the past few months.

"Summer months are usually dull, but this Summer we have broken all records," declared Mr. Gill. "At the present time we contemplate securing larger quarters, in order to take care of the increased trade. Among the large repair orders recently received was one for eighty-five typewriters from a suburban school. The demand for rebuilt typewriters has been steadily increasing. A sure sign that business, in general, is on the mend."

NEW PRODUCT PROVES TRADE BUILDER

How the addition of a new product to a line will sometimes do much to stimulate the sale of the other products is shown by the experience of the Prince Macaroni Manufacturing Company of Boston.

The concern, which is one of the country's largest manufacturers of macaroni and spaghetti, recently put on the market a new sauce made especially for use on macaroni and spaghetti. As a result, its sales of the parent products have jumped enormously.

Asked for an explanation, Mr. Hubbard, of the Prince Company, stated that he believed many people had not been able to realize how appetizing spaghetti and macaroni could be, because of inability to prepare proper sauces to improve the flavor of the dish. As a result it was served only occasionally in most homes.

Since bringing the new, ready-to-use, sauce to the attention of housewives, spaghetti and macaroni is being used regularly, instead of occasionally, as formerly.

1,500 RETURN TO WHITTALL MILLS

The mills of the M. J. Whittall Associates, located in Dedham, Worcester and Palmer, resumed operations this week after having been closed down for a brief period for necessary repairs to equipment and to give all employes a brief vacation. Approximately 1,500 employes returned to their places with the resumption of work.

WORKING TWO SHIFTS AT MILFORD MILL

Milford, Aug. 12.—Smith Mills, Inc., which recently removed its plant from Worcester to the old Hegal Shoe Co. building in this town, has started working with a double shift, operating both night and day, owing to increased business.

AT SOUTH MANCHESTER, CT., Cheney Brothers Silk Company are having plans drawn for a two-story fireproof structure of brick and steel to be used as a transformer house.

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

What constitutes greatness?

In the final analysis would it not be fairly accurate to say that those men are great who contribute most for the benefit of the human family?

At that, that would be my answer. What's yours?

The New York Times asked me to name the greatest twelve men in America.

I refused. I prefer to ponder the question, but, off-hand, among names that occur to me are the following:

Thomas A. Edison.
John D. Rockefeller.
Henry Ford.
The Mayo Brothers.
Herbert Hoover.
Charles M. Schwab.
Luther Burbank.
Woodrow Wilson, or Charles E. Hughes.
George Eastman.
Charles W. Eliot.
General George W. Goethals.

Out in Kansas lives a unique character, Ed Howe, whose "Monthly" all written by himself, is full of homely sayings. In his latest issue Howe discusses this subject greatness in a strain all his own. You may or may not at all agree with him; nevertheless, I think you will be interested in what he says:

"The critics greatly admire William Shakespeare. The best of them, after writing about him forty years in magazines and newspapers, finally put out a book on the subject.

"Why are these men unable to appreciate a man equally great in other lines: a great railroad president, manufacturer, merchant? Why are the critics able to argue date only sometimes? Do they not know that sonnets are more perfume, an imitation of rose or heliotrope—two other things of no great practical moment?

"We have a citizen named John D. Rockefeller. With his own money he has built in Peking, China, at an expense of eight million dollars, a hospital requiring fifty-nine buildings and twenty-five acres of land. The organization of so large that more than seven hundred employes of different grades are required to operate it. The object of the hospital is not only to help the poor and ill but to educate Chinese students and send them out where ignorance and disease most abound.

"This is only one of the accomplishments of Mr. Rockefeller. Every year he spends a good many million dollars in the public welfare work. He has dedicated a large a portion of his private fortune to this work that it will continue forever; the world will never see the last of it, as the Rockefeller foundation is self-perpetuating and the only danger is possibility that the theoretical Good Gentleman may steal the nest egg provided.

"Is not this man Rockefeller actually worth a dozen Shakespeares, with a dozen Goethes, Dantes and Miltons and the like thrown in for good measure?

"Mr. Rockefeller asks no credit for his work. I see few references to it, except that once a year his stewards print a report of their activities. I see few references to his munificence and the wide territory covered.

"This report for 1921 has just appeared. Watch your papers; probably you will note reference after reference to various men like Edson Bradley, Herbert Hoover, Sam Gompers, Sinclair Lewis, Douglas Fairbanks, and none to this greatest man in all history for intelligent philanthropy, certainly, and possibly in one or two other respects.

"If you will observe even 1% regrets, I hope) that the papers much enjoy mentioning Mr. Rockefeller's name in connection with certain foolish lady members of his family, who have brought about a regrettable state of affairs for which he is not at all responsible."

Someone has said that there is no greater person than the working-class mother who contrives, on a few dollars a week, to bring up a large family of decent boys and girls.

• • •

After all, isn't every person who does the best that he or she knows how about as great as the greatest of the shining lights?

(Copyright, 1922, by B. C. Forbes.)

BANK CLEARINGS OFF FROM LAST WEEK'S

Bank clearings at leading cities of the United States for the week ending Aug. 10, as reported to Bradstreet's Journal, aggregated $4,648,912,000, a loss of 13.9 per cent. from last week, but a gain of 9.6 per cent. over the week last year.

Outside of New York the total is $2,486,812,000, a decrease of 4.9 per cent. from last week, but an increase of 16.1 per cent. over this week last year. Chicago reports a gain of 8.8 per cent. and Boston 14.3 per cent.

ESSEX NOTES ARE SOLD IN GLOUCESTER

Essex County has sold $33,000 "turnpike" loan notes, dated Aug. 15 and payable December 15, 1923, to Cape Ann National Bank, Gloucester, at 3.44%: Naumkeag Trust Co., Salem, 3.90% plus $5; Beverly Trust Co., 3.60%; Salem Trust Co., 3.41%; and Merchants National Bank, Salem, 3.44% plus $2.25.

Totoco Pool Output

Gulf Oil produced 41,000 barrels from the Totoco pool in 24 hours to 7 a. m. August 10, Mexican Petroleum 34,000, and Mexican Seaboard 31,000, making a total of 106,000 for the pool.

Steels Show Improvement as Prices Take Fresh Rise in Wall Street Dealings

NEW HIGHS FOR YEAR SET BY MORE ISSUES

Steels evidenced improvement as prices took a fresh rise in week-end transactions in Wall Street. New highs for 1922 were established by a number of issues.

American Radiator, the so-called "mystery" stock," whose rise from a low this year of 82 is still unexplained, made a record high for all time, up a point at 116.

International Harvester made a record above 1920, up 1¼ at 113.

New 1922 highs included: Sears-Roebuck, ahead 2½ at 92½; May Stores, 2 at 125½; National Enameling, ¾ at 58¾; North American Co., ¾ at 76½; Industrial Alcohol, 1¼ at 66¾; and Wabash preferred A, ¾ at 34½.

In the steels, Republic lifted a point at 73¾; Lackawanna, 2¾ at 90¾; Bethlehem B, 2 at 80; Gulf States, 1¼ at 82¾; and U. S. Steel, ⅝ at 101⅝.

General Asphalt, owing to its decided showing, reacted 1¼ at 65½; Mex Pete, after gaining 1¾ at 177½, sold down to 175¾.

Studebaker was up 1¼ at 125¾. Nominal buyers lifted Allis-Chalmers 1¾ at 36¾. Kresge took on 3¾ at 162¾.

International Paper receded a point at 97¾.

In the rails point or more losses, due to profit taking, appeared in Great Northern preferred at 93½, Northern Pacific at 81 and Union Pacific at 144¾.

Emerson-Brantingham preferred was up 2 points.

Rail Bonds Are Most Active, Making Gains

Trading in bonds on the New York Stock Exchange was dull.

Railroad bonds were the most active, Kansas City Southern 5s, Adjustment 4s, stamped, and Wabash first 5s gaining ½ to nearly 2 points each, while St. Paul convertible and Illinois Central refunding issues were fractionally lower.

Czecho Slovakian 8s and City of Prague 8s were down ½ and ⅝ of a point, respectively, but City of Sao Paulo 8s were slightly higher.

In the industrial issues Wilson Company 7½s, Republic Iron and Steel 5s and Cerro De Pasco 8s moved to higher ground.

Liberty issues held steady with the exception of the first 4¼s, which were down 12 to 14 points.

Boston Notes

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—"See no change in market and nothing that suggests selling 'stocks.'

GENERAL ELECTRIC stockholders in October get 2 per cent. and 5 per cent stock dividends, the first under plan of paying 5 per cent. in new $10 stock in place of 2 per cent. semi-annual stock dividends formerly paid in common.

INVINCIBLE OIL production is said to be maintained at steady pace with continued good results in development campaign.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER'S new high for the year as made Thursday was had to its further raise of $5 a ton in newsprint prices to $80, effective on September 1.

WICKWIRE SPENCER shows net profit, before depreciation and bond interest, of $188,033 for quarter ended June 30, against $220,461 for year's first half.

MOTHER LODE COALITION reports production cost for year's first five months $4.60 per ton, with nine claims, having results to high copper content of ore.

STUTZ will appear on the big board within next three weeks, according to a story circulated here.

INTERNATIONAL PAPER is now talked of to do no better than earn its preferred dividends this year, even with the big increase in prices for its products.

POND CREEK and Island Creek Coal are now getting a better car supply, though conditions by no means approximate normal.

SWIFT & CO. is expected to earn around its 8 per cent dividend this year. When current need big money most investors promptly forget past has always seen those converted later into better than average profits.

NEW HAVEN is talked of in some quarters as nearly due for another advance.

WOLVERINE mine has produced and sold since organization 176,558,803 pounds of copper which realized, with $262,897 other income, a total of $28,197,453.

EASTERN MASSACHUSETTS stock on B and adjustment issues contains a "joker," in that the dividends may be paid either in cash or in common stock.

SEES I. R. T. PLAN AS PUT IN DANGER

Alvin W. Krech, president of Equitable Trust Co., in letter to stockholders of Manhattan Railway Co., says plan of readjustment of Interborough Rapid Transit and Manhattan Railway relations is in grave danger of abandonment owing to failure of Manhattan stockholders to deposit stock with substantial unanimity.

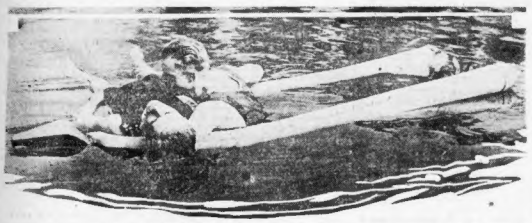
MOTORCYCLIST RUNS DOWN FIVE WOMEN IN HEART OF THE CITY!

Photo diagram shows how victims were struck and injured in traffic jam at corner of Washington and Summer streets when rider failed to heed the signals of Traffic Officer Joseph A. Grimes. Two of the injured were sent to the hospital. The driver was held pending further investigation of the case. Inset is of Miss Bernice Anderson of No. 11 Dalton street, one of the most seriously hurt. She was taken to the Haymarket Square Relief Station.



BRING ON THE DROWNIN' HEIRESS! ALL YOU GOTTA DO NOW IS WALK

right out and save her! Photo shows the new life-saving device invented by the Germans. It's a foot-driven apparatus called the hydrom and it is capable of making nine kilometers an hour. All you gotta do is pedal along and the rest is a cinch. Nice thing to have for a Sunday morning stroll down to Boston Light. (Photo by Wide World)

DISAPPOINTED SOUTH BOSTON INVENTOR disappears after smashing his invention into small bits following its rejection by a nationally known auto accessories manufacturer. Joseph P. Smith, at right, had devised an automobile signalling apparatus after many months of toil and expense. Mrs. Smith, shown with her baby, Joseph, Jr., has appealed to the American Legion posts all over the county to aid her search for him.

HERE IS THE DEDHAM MOTHER WHO OFFERED to give up her husband to his soul mate so that the affinity's five nameless children could grow up without the stigma of shame on their lives. She is Mrs. Caroline Gleason of No. 45 Mt. Hope street, and her son, Edward E. Gleason.

OH, LOOKIT FLAPS! HERE'S THE GRANDMA FLAPPER OF 'EM ALL! THIS giant turtle was brought here Friday by Skipper Ernest McCullum of the schooner Gorilla. It weighs 1,500 pounds and is supposed to be 500 years old. Naturalists say it was a gay young flapper down there in the Caribbean when Columbus discovered this land of the dry and home of the finale-hoppers. From flipper to flipper it measures 10 feet and when flapping around its native heath it was the cat's meow of the briny deep. It was caught off Nantucket lightship and died just as the schooner was making port.

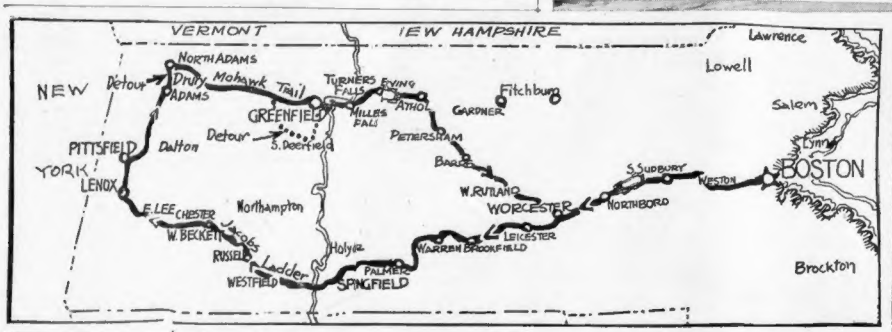
MOHAWK TRAIL AND JACOB'S LADDER OFFER IDEAL AUTO TOUR

UNSURPASSED PANORAMAS PRESENT THEMSELVES AT MANY POINTS

By HAROLD E. CASEY.

It is unnecessary to motor out of our own State to view nature's wonderful attractions and remarkable contrasts, for situated in western part of Massachusetts are the wonderful Berkshire Hills. Here is a highland region of clouds and sky, green fields, forest streams, exquisite lakes and mountain country. This region is filled with many natual wonders and the panoramas which present themselves from the various points while tourng are unsurpassed.



In making this trip the writer finds two miles of the route just west of Palmer under construction, but passable, also about a mile of the road under construction at Lee. There is a short detour over fair roads between Adams and North Adams and a detour of seventeen miles between Shelburne Falls and Greenfield, but it is all on State highway. However, making the detour is considered by many to be more picturesque and interesting than the original route now closed.

JACOB'S LADDER—MOHAWK TRAIL.

In making the trip over Jacob's Ladder this stretch of road is very much different from the road from which it derived its name. The old road was a terror to the heart of any traveler, but the highway commission has given the tourist of today a new road upon which the grades are comparatively slight.

The Mohawk Trail—the first knowledge we have of this trail was in 1681, when the Pocumtuck Indians invaded the land of the Mohawks, humbling and weakening that powerful tribe. To reach the Mohawks and Pocumtucks inland a trail across the mountains which is now closely followed by the new highway named by the State commission "The Mohawk Trail."

Today the Mohawk Trail forms the most interesting and delightful part of the scenic automobile route between Greenfield and North Adams. Its easy grades it crosses Hoosac and Florida Mountains and for natural beauty and grandeur of scenery it is unequalled.

43.8 Worcester — On Front street you will pass the Warren Hotel on the left. This hotel is conveniently located only a few steps from the business, shopping and amusement centre of the city. Wholehearted, hospitable, cheerful service and personal attention are the watch words of the management. Its public and guests rooms are comfortable and tastefully furnished, offering every possible convenience, rest and recreation. One of the distinguishing features of this hotel is found in the careful attention given to its cuisine. Only the very best of food is served, well prepared, appetizing and in generous portions. Mr. R. M. Daschner, the manager, has made it a special point to have his menus as varied as possible by serving as many entirely different dinners as there are days in the week.

AN ORIGINAL SLOGAN.

The Hotel Warren is also headquarters for the Kiwanis Club, Advertising Club and Lion's Club. "Be at Home—Away from Home." This hotel slogan is entirely original with Mr. Daschner.

15.2 Woronoco — Straight ahead through Russell and Huntington cross railroad. Turn left across bridge over railroad. Passing on the right Jacob's Log Cabin Inn. It is well for tourists to stop here and visit the wonderful gift and souvenir shop. At this particular point also is located the wonderful Jacob's spring.

A DELIGHTFUL SPOT.

28.3 Chester—Straight ahead, passing Whitcher Garage, straight ahead through East Lee road under construction to Lee to Lenox, "The Village of Beautiful Estates," four corners turn right on Main Street. The Hotel Aspinwall, a resort renowned the world over as one of the most delightful spots in America. It is in the heart of the famous Berkshire Hills and is the most fashionable, exclusive and attractive resort in this country. The property crowns a knoll 1,460 feet above the sea level, overlooks the links of the Lenox Golf Club, and is but a few moments' walk from the village postoffice and stores. The views are unsurpassed, commanding, as they do, the Green Mountains on the north, the Salisbury Hills of Connecticut on the south, the Catskill range in New York State to the west, and October and Washington mountains to the east. In connection there is a special spacious tea terrace on the veranda with service a la carte until late in the evening. Here while dining you have almost a complete view of the famous Berkshire Hills.

49.8

63.7 Greenfield—The Weldon Hotel ... locally requires much detailed public reference as to have greatly increased its accommodations and its beauty. To the newcomer, the picturesque entrance with greenery and Italian stone-settles, the handsome office, and the lounge-hall or library effect, the broad passages and solid woodwork of each floor, the spacious, glass-roofed sun-parlor and outer porch with plentiful vines and other verdure, and which in Summertime are opened widely to the lawn, the lofty topmost floor, recently built (especially for warm-weather guests) of a semi-Spanish effect by way of broad screen doors, on open-air corridors from which airy suites overlook the woody hill country; these items are likely to impress guests with pleasant surprises.

The Weldon dining room is conducted a la carte, serving at all hours. No pains are spared to ensure good cookery. Guests are cordially invited to visit the extremely fine hotel kitchens and their adjuncts.

MODERATE TARIFFS.

It may be added that the policy of the Weldon is distinctly and consistently a scale of moderate tariffs. For guests desiring to make a prolonged stay, special rates are available, according to season. To golfers, the privileges of the Greenfield Golf Club are open, by cards immediately obtainable at the hotel. A commodious clubhouse, with all conveniences, adjoins the eighteen-hole links, with plentiful fair greens and hazards for the enthusiast. A charming outlook of hills and woods surrounds the course.

Mr. J. T. Seller, the residential manager, has a special feature added to this hotel—that of a dinner dance every Saturday evening on the famous Weldon Hotel roof garden.

Continue on High street out of town. Cross bridge railroad. Turn right through Turners Falls. Straight ahead to Millers Falls. Cross bridge. Turn right, passing through Erving, West Orange-Orange.

87.1 Athol—straight ahead on Main street under railroad brides through Athol Centre at Fair Grounds, bear right through Petersham, Barre, Rutland, Holden to 127.3 Worcester, following same route via Marlboro to Boston.

HEAT IN SPEEDING CUTS LIFE OF TIRE

A high-grade tire on a racing car will sometimes stand up as far as 500 miles, about one-twentieth of the life of a tire operated under ordinary conditions. This difference in tire service is due directly to a difference in the heat developed, says the United States Tire Company.

Heat exerts a deteriorating effect on rubber in proportion to the intensity and length of time the rubber is exposed to it. Running at high speed quickly raises the temperature of a tire. This heat results from the internal friction set up in the tire carcass. Tires are designed to resist the effects of heat produced by ordinary every-day car operation, but they cannot long remain intact when highly heated by continuous speeding. The tire bills of the speeder are likely to be higher than those of the driver who proceeds at a moderate pace.

LIQUOR PLOT IS REVEALED BY ARRESTS

The United States has got under the prohibition agent graft in New England. Edgar Raymond Davis of Boston and two other state prohibition agents are under arrest charged with having stolen confiscated liquor from government warehouses.

Confessions are expected to bare the whole plot of how State prohibition agents have conducted raids, seized liquor, placed it in warehouses, robbed their own warehouses, resold it, and in some instances, seized it over again in an endless chain of graft.

Davis was taken into custody by United States Marshal Leyden in Springfield. Raymond S. Daniels, also of Springfield, was arrested with him. J. A. Tomlin, another prohibition agent, is a fugitive from justice.

Federal warrants were issued Friday for the arrest of the men. Just before the warrants were issued Tomlin dropped from sight. The men are charged specifically with stealing five barrels of wine from the Bay State Storage Company's warehouse here.

The wine had been seized in a raid in Southwick last week. The accused men are alleged to have taken it from the warehouse and hidden it in a Wilcox street garage.

Daniels was given a hearing before United States Commissioner Broadhurst. He was held in $5,000 bail for a second appearance on August 18.

The garage is owned by the widow of Carlo Siniscalchi, Italian leader, who was murdered several months ago. Mrs. Siniscalchi says who rented the garage to some men but cannot tell their names. This links up with stories of wholesale bootlegging in this district and may reveal the source of imported booze as well as the exportation of liquors seized by Western Massachusetts prohibition agents and stolen.

Edward H. Williams, supervisor of Federal agents in this part of the State, went to the garage in company with Field Director James P. Roberts and recovered the liquor.

WHITE STREAK FINE AFTER 5,060 MILES

F. H. Lucas of the Mitchell-Lucas Motor Company has just received word from the drivers of the White Streak 10,000-mile car, from Columbia, South Carolina, which says that they have completed almost 5,000 miles without the slightest difficulty or trouble, although they have encountered many conditions which try a car to its utmost.

This 10,000-mile White Streak was in Boston on July 1, at which time it had a very small mileage, as it had just started out from New York. The purpose of this car is to cover 10,000 miles without unsealing the hood or dropping the bottom of the crank case. So far they have been quite successful.

JACK DEMPSEY TO SHOW PUNCH AT BRAVES FIELD SHOW

4 TEN-ROUND BOUTS ALSO ON THE CARD

By JACK CONWAY.

Jack Dempsey bows into our midst tonight when he takes on Jim Darcy of Portland, Oregon, in a four-round exhibition at Braves' Field, under the direction of the Faneuil Club.

Jack Dempsey

The postponement of this show appears to have increased interest in the affair. Johnny Mahony has made arrangements to care for a tremendous crowd.

It will be Dempsey's last exhibition bout for some time. He leaves tonight for Michigan City, Indiana, to commence training for his ten-round championship battle with Bill Brennan which will be staged on Labor Day.

The regular fight fans are anxious to get a line on Dempsey's condition. As Darcy is a rough, tough fellow, he will give the champion enough of a workout so that the fans will be able to tell just how good Dempsey is right now.

It is expected, though, that the bulk of the crowd will be made up of persons who are not ordinarily in the habit of attending fistic events. The ladies in particular are anxious to see the champion box.

Dempsey is today the greatest drawing card in the history of the ring. This is due to his willingness to meet all comers.

When the champion signed to clash with Harry Wills, negro heavyweight champion, even the knockers were compelled to admit that "Tiger Jack" is a little bit different from other champions.

Four Ten-Round Bouts to Decisions Also

There will also be four ten-round bouts to decisions. The feature number will bring together George Robinson of Cambridge and Jack McClellan of Somerville. These men recently engaged in a sensational fight at the Arena, Robinson winning a close decision. McClellan is now out to even the score, while Robinson wants to show that McClellan is not his class. The dope points to a victory by Robinson.

Young Tansey and Willie Gradwell will go ten rounds as will Frankie Ryan and Freddy Madden. Tom Cotter and Pat McEney are also down to swap blows in a ten-round mill.

Dave Shade Will Probably Meet Eddie Shevlin Next.

Dave Shade will probably be Eddie Shevlin's next opponent. Dave is the best fighter in the Shade family. He has reached the heights of pugilistic success, while Brothers George and Billy have been having their troubles scoring an occasional win.

Shade defeated Nate Siegal and Paul Doyle in bouts at the Boston Arena. As Shevlin is fighting better right now than he has at any time during his brilliant career, he will probably readily consent to a meeting with the Leo Flynn entry.

George Ward will have to wait awhile before he is given another match with the Dartmouth professor. Ward is a brilliant boxer and has a world of natural ability. But he doesn't know enough about "inside" boxing to conquer Shevlin in a hard, gruelling battle. As this writer pointed out, with the two men in the best of condition, Shevlin is the better man. We thought, however, that Shevlin would not be able to hold his top-notch form as a result of a three days' postponement.

After the Shade match, Jock Malone may receive consideration from Billy Henderson, Shevlin's manager. Malone, of course, will have to make the welterweight limit of 147 pounds to get a shot at the New England champion.

Mickey Walker is Treated For Stomach Trouble.

Mickey Walker is under the care of a stomach specialist at Newark, N. J. The attending physician says that Walker suffered an attack of ptomaine poisoning about six weeks ago and that he never got all of the poisoning out of his system. This may partly account for Walker's poor showing against Jock Malone. He appeared sluggish and was not able to get his usual power behind his smashes. Walker will probably start on a vacation next week and will not box again until September. He may then come back to Boston to do battle with Louis Bogash.

Arena A. C. Not to Operate Next Week.

The Arena A. C. will not stage a show next week. It was unable to obtain a suitable card and did not care to put on a show between a lot of second raters. As no other club will be in the field, fistic fans will receive a rest from the strenuous game of hit and getaway.

PLYMOUTH TO HAVE A SOCCER ELEVEN

Plymouth, Aug. 12.—The Plymouth Independent Soccer football team is in process of organization and will be a distinctly amateur aggregation. Daniel Durnion and Andrew Rae, Sr., are the coaches, and both are former stars in international contests. William Gault is secretary and other players are John Durnion, Frank W. Challoner, James Rae, John Yates, Arthur Pinches, Harry Resnick, Charles Cooper, Andrew Rae, Jr., James Durnion.

The same pair met in the final a year ago, and Mrs. Mallory was the victor, 6-1, 7-5.

The Norse woman, who has not met defeat on American courts this season, won in the semi-finals from Mrs. May Sutton Bundy of Los Angeles, while Mrs. Jessup eliminated Miss Leslie Bancroft of West Newton, Mass.

MOTOR NEWS AND NOTES

C. F. DONNOCKER Automobile Editor

NEWTON BOY IS WINNER OF NASH PRIZE

C. P. Rockwell, Inc., recently announced a prize letter-writing contest for the children of Nash owners. The replies received were not only interesting, but some of them very meritorious.

The automobile editors of the various papers were asked to form a committee to act as judges of the contest. It was no easy task to make a selection, but after a strenuous two hours the committee chose the following letter written by Byron D. Wilkerson, No. 43 Woodcliffe Road, Newton Highlands, as the winner:

"Gentlemen: The Nash car in my mind is the 'car of cars.' We have taken many auto trips; we seldom have tire trouble. Our car has been about 33,000 miles. The car rides as easily as any other car I have been in. The gears shift perfectly and easily. As a hill climber I don't think it can be beat. There are no hills in this part of New Hampshire that we have to shift gears for. Dad says the engine is running better now that she was when we bought her. We average about 14 miles on a gallon of gas and about 60 miles on a quart of oil.

"BYRON D. WILKERSON.

"Russell Cottages Kearsage, N. H."

The winner received $25 in gold and the $5 in gold was sent to Ruth A. Tilesen, No. 27 Radford Lane, Dorchester Centre, and also to Charles Schwer, No. 628 Watertown street, Newtonville.

ASK MR. FIX IT

Mr. Fix It will be omitted for the next two weeks and will appear again Saturday, September 3.

Dear Mr. Fix It:—I have a Van Sicklen speedometer on my Ford. The cable and housing is broken. Could you tell me where I can get one? Thanking you in advance, I remain C. A. J., Dracut Centre.

Newspaper ethics forbid us to give you this information through our column. Any big accessory house ought to be able to supply you with the parts or the information you wish.

Dear Mr. Fix It:—I have a 1915 five passenger model 12 Velie car. I can put fresh water in radiator and run two miles. It gets very hot. Pump seems O. K. I just rewired the engine. Could you explain what causes the engine to heat up so much? I am sure the wiring is O. K. It has a knock which seems to be in one piston. J. H. M.

Manchester, N. H.

The gears on your distributor shaft may have become worn and slipped on the shaft which will make your spark late and have the tendency to make your motor heat up. Also examine your hose connections in the radiator to see that the fabric is not broken down, so that it impairs a proper circulation of water. Also make sure that your oiling system is working properly.

Dear Mr. Fix It:—I am very much interested in your column, and would like to know if you can help me out. I have a 1921 Ford touring car, there is a knock in the motor. It has a hollow sound as if it were in one of the pistons. I thought at first it was a wrist-pin. I pulled the four pistons out but none of them get warped and stick. But this hollow sound, but is not regular at times. It shows up and when you open the gas it gets louder. Also at times it is power on hills, when warmed up. A friend told me it must be a valve sticking. He suggested taking out the valves and emery papering the stems, which he claims gets warped and sticks. But this hollow noise sounds too loud to be a valve. Thanking you in advance.

Holyoke, Mass. C. S.

This knock seems to indicate a loose centre main bearing or else connecting rod. Would advise you to examine your main bearings of your crank shaft and all connecting main bearings.

CARLOADS OF GRAY CARS ARRIVE

Despite the hindrance to freight movements by the railroad strike, the Brown Motors Corporation of No. 92 Massachusetts avenue has been fortunate in getting several carloads of cars, and has been able to make steady deliveries to the large number of persons who have been awaiting their cars.

The coming of the Gray has proved more conclusively the claims set up by the makers. In workmanship and general appointments it is in many ways equal to high-priced cars, and its comfort of riding, its power and all-round economy have been a revelation to those who were fortunate to be at the head of the list in ordering. It is living up to its claim of "quality in a light car."

The Gray factory at Detroit is now swinging close to full production. Waldo Brown, president of the local agency, has received word that 400 cars are being turned out this week. With the completion and co-ordination of other units, which will be very soon, the plant will be in full blast. It is expected that before September comes the output will reach 600 cars daily. A large part of these cars will come to Boston, where the first ordering and the present buying exceeded that of any other part of the country.

WINTHROP HAS BIG ATTRACTION SUNDAY

Manager Cronin of the Bay Views has booked a double attraction for the Bay View All Army game at Fort Banks, Winth.op, tomorrow.

Miss Milly Hill will perform for the Bay Views.

In addition "Dogie" Durant, who pitched a no-hit no-run game for Winchester Town against Brookline, and "Giraffe" Clarke will be the Bay View battery.

UTILITY COUPE CHEVROLET IS A SUCCESS

Factory executives of the Chevrolet Motor Company state that the response to the announcement of their Utility Coupe, which is a car built especially for business men and salesmen, has been so great as to amply justify their opinion that business men and salesmen would appreciate a car built especially for their use.

"In designing the Chevrolet Utility Coupe," states W. C. Sills, of the Sills-Chevrolet Co., "we felt that the motor car was used to such a great extent nowadays, purely as a utility for commercial purposes, that a car should be built especially to meet these requirements. This car, of course, should give all weather protection and otherwise be built to withstand hard usage.

"One prominent official of a concern using a large number of cars for its salesmen has demonstrated that each of the salesmen's sales increase from 40 per cent. to 100 per cent. as soon as he begins using a motor car. This is because this firm has found that their salesmen can make from six to eight towns a day where they formerly made from one to four, and it gives these men an additional advantage of being able to carry along a quantity of advertising matter which they can place to the best advantage at strategic points."

Famed the World Over

Most beautiful coach work and upholstery, case of riding, and a motor famed the world over for its power and economy make the Chevrolet "FB" Sedan extraordinary value at $1395.

PICK ROSENBERG TO BEAT KRUG

New York, Aug. 12.—Dave Rosenberg, the popular Brooklyn middleweight, rules a 2 to 1 favorite over Phil Krug for their fight of fifteen rounds next Monday night at the Velodrome. This is a match for the middleweight championship, with Johnny Wilson outside looking in. Rosenberg and Krug met some time ago in Newark and to the surprise of the fight world Krug received the popular decision. Rosenberg did not appear the least perturbed over the result, but simply claimed he wasn't allowed to fight in his usual manner.

BATTLE OF BATSMEN THE GREATEST EVER

Chicago, Aug. 12 (By the Associated Press)—The race for batting honors in the American League has developed into one of the hottest fights in years with only a fraction of a point separating Ty Cobb and George Sisler, for the premier honors, according to averages including games of last Wednesday, released today. The two stars are in a virtual tie with .409 plus each.

Ken Williams, the home run slugger of the majors, who has cracked out his 30th homer, has joined the select ten by boosting his mark from .313 to .322.

Tilly Walker of the Athletics, is the runner-up for home run drive honors, with 26, and Babe Ruth is the king of swat, is trailing the pair with [illegible].

Sisler, in addition to leading in four ply hitting, continues out in front for total base honors, while Sisler, his teammate, ran his [illegible] over the century mark for 87 or more runs.

ACCORDING to one scientist, our arms and legs will gradually disappear from our bodies, though he estimates this calamity as not occurring for at least 10,000 years. Meanwhile, we do not have to worry.

Desert Love

By Joan Conquest

She trusted herself with a Sheik in the lonely desert—

WOULD YOU?

Jill Carden, a beautiful and daring young English girl, brought up in a conventional home, burns her bridges behind her and lives in an oasis, far from her own race, for the love of an Arab chief. She was seventeen, motherless and much sought after by reason of her great wealth, which, however, disappeared when her father's will was read. After getting a position as traveling companion she finds herself at Suez. She gets her first glimpse of Hahmed, the Camel King, and tosses a coin to decide whether she shall speak to him or go back to England. It falls heads and she is committed to the Sheik and the desert.

THROUGH all Jill's haste and her annoyance the inner membrane of her mind, that delicate fabric woven of intuition and divination, which gives women the pull on so many occasions, and on certain courses get her past the post lengths ahead of man, whispered to her that it had not failed her earlier in the day, and that if she could but stick out the next few hours she would find a sure reward for her present distress.

But she stopped short and clicked her teeth angrily when she met the native of the restaurant face to face in a narrow street, and turned and walked in the opposite direction as quickly as her dignity would allow.

But after the same thing had happened three times, and that it had suddenly struck her that she was being headed in the direction of a quarter where unveiled women peered from windows with great eyes made larger by the rims of kohl smeared on the lid, and the cheeks rendered dead white with the powder that proves so strangely attractive to the eastern prostitute, she suddenly made up her mind to get herself out of the danger and difficulty. She was utterly lost, and walking at a pace that was almost a run, turned into the street she found nearest.

Not one open door did she see; at least, not one that was not congested with women sitting smoking or eating sticky sweetmeats, or drying their heads plastered in the henna clay which would eventually dye their hair the red favored of man.

She was well nigh breathless and wondering for how long she could continue when the man suddenly appeared at the top of the street into which she had just turned, and seeing her salaamed deeply.

Back she twisted like a hunted hare and raced up the street through which she had just passed.

It was empty, but on her left standing ajar was a door painted bright blue.

Without pausing to think she entered, closing it behind her just as the man relentlessly pursuing her passed in ignorance on the other side.

In the middle of the courtyard two Eastern women in the domestic act of disemboweling a kid looked up lazily, and one smiling, pointed to the upper story of the house, through the small windows of which came the sound of stringed instruments, and seeing that the stranger did not understand, explained her gesture in broken French:

"Au premier etage—vos amieze—los englaisez."

No idea of any further possible danger entering her head, and at a complete loss to understand, but thankful for her present safety, Jill crossed the court, slipping unromantically on a piece of the animal's entrails which lay about, and entering a low door mounted the stairs.

Through a curtained archway the distinct twang of an American voice came to her as a message of peace, so pushing back the stuff she entered to find herself confronted by ten pairs of eyes of different nationality.

"Come right in," twanged the same voice, "guess you're from the same boat! Cute of you to find your way here all by your lonesome!"

The well-corseted wife of a Canadian King, flanked on one side by her thin, leather-skinned, neat daughter, and on the other by the inevitable Italian marquis, whose tailor had evidently been an Santorial futurist, pointed to a cushion on the nobleman's off side, on which perplexed Jill squatted in imitation of the others. The party consisted of the aforementioned trio, two flash-looking English women, who had in tow a certain type of man who is only to be found on board ship, an obese German, a French widow whose weeds grew more from utility than necessity, and a dapper little Frenchman who twinkled his over-manicured fingers for the benefit of a healthy, jolly looking Australian girl sitting unconfortably on the adjacent cushion. The party's dragoman proffered a cup of coffee and a cigarette. The former was excellent, the latter, after one puff, Jill extinguished on the floor, for she knew tobacco when she smoked it, and guessed at hashesh without having to look at the slightly brightened eyes of those who eat smoking the same brand around her.

Then she glanced curiously round the room. Long, low, with four tawdry glass and gilt chandeliers hanging from the not overclean ceiling, cushions spreading all over the floor excepting in the middle where lay an exquisite Persian carpet, long mirrors on all sides, little inlaid tables, and at the far end, built into the wall with steps leading up to it, a bed behind gilt bars, the door in which was fastened by a gilt padlock.

It seemed that their dragoman had brought them to the house so as to add yet more perquisites to his daily remuneration by regaling them with an exhibition of Eastern dancing.

"What kind of dancing?" asked Jill with a slight frown, as the twinkling music suddenly stopped.

"Guess we can't tell you!" replied the American mother, whose corsets were not in exact accord with the cushions upon which she sat, breathing heavily from her upper whalebone d register.

"Nous esperons le mieux," said the Frenchman, winking at the dragoman.

And that moment they were enlightened.

The two English women emitted each a little screech, the American mother caught convulsively at her daughter, who coldly raised her long-handled lorgnettes the more carefully to survey the picture before her. The Australian girl sat quiet, as did the Englishman who had been there before, the Italian ejaculated "Per dio," and the Frenchman "Mon Dieu," as the widow swiftly rose side of her veil across her face, hid her crimson mouth, but in no way impeded her view, while Jill looked round hastily for a way of escape, but suddenly remembering the certain peril in the street decided, as she edged as far as possible from the marchese, to sit out the difficulties of the moment.

To natives, a dressed or undressed dancer is nothing more than a plaything, or something to help pass the hour; he will look at and criticise her with much less enthusiasm than he would a she-camel, and remunerate her or her owner according to the measure of pleasure he has found in her posturing.

But it is difficult, wellnigh impossible, to describe the feeling of the occidental women when three orientals of their own sex, without a vestige of clothing, suddenly one after the other, like ducks, sidled into the room.

They were none of them in their first youth, and the dragoman, after watching their movements, decided once and for all to withdraw his patronage from the house, and sat wondering how much he dared try to extract from his patron's pockets for such an exhibition, while Jill, who felt as though she had been suddenly struck between the eyes, sat hypnotised by the undulating forms before her, until she was overcome by a frantic desire to bury her face in a cushion and to give way to unrestrained hysterical laughter. This same feeling has been known to overcome one in Church when a hen, side-tracking through the open door, takes a constitutional up the aisle on a Sunday morning in the country; also it has been known to seize you in its grip at a levee when your predecessor's shoe-buckles, not having been properly adjusted, flip up and down like shutters as their owner, in solitary state walks up the audience chamber; worse and stronger still is it when your reverened bishop uncle, of whom you have great expectations, insists at morning prayers upon them things which have been left undone, when before your earthly eyes gapes the cotton dress of Elias the cook, whose comfortable dorsal proportions have forbidden the matutinal union of a couple or so of buttons and buttonholes.

Try as she would she could not overcome it, neither could she remove her gaze from the three females who, poor things, were but doing their best to add to the family coffers. Up and down, and round and round they went, the string band twanging an accompaniment until the gauze scarf of the middle lady catching in the hanging chandelier put an end to their rhythmical swayings, while like hens with a suspended cherry they hopped in turn off the ground in their effort to disentangle their one and only bit of covering.

Everyone sat still until the disentanglement had taken place, upon which event the dancers once more advanced in force, each selecting a special man victim, until Jill, absolutely helpless and afraid of raising native wrath by allowing even a glimmer of a smile to appear, buried her pretty head on the marchese's over-padded shoulder, which action he of course took for a sign of enough assument, responding to it by slipping his arm round the girl's waist, but circumspectly enough so that it should not be seen by the Can King's relations, while Jill prayed for strength to resist until the end.

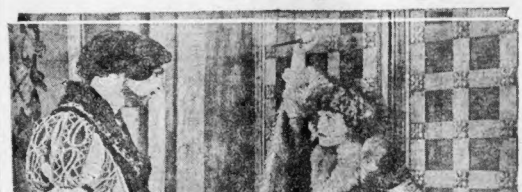
Protected by King's Pledge

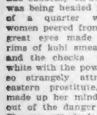


A KING'S word should be good in any country and Princess Mary Tudor was determined that she would hold her royal brother, King Henry VIII, to his promise that the second time she wed it should be to a husband of her own choosing. After the death of old King Louis XII of France, whom Mary had married much against her own will and in order to save the life of Charles Brandno, the man she loved, Duke Francis, nephew of King Louis, began forcing his attentions upon her.

While the body of the old king lay in state young Francis forced his way into the apartments of the unhappy young queen. Roused to fury by his insolent assumption that she could care for him, Mary drew a dagger from the folds of her dress. Her white face and blazing eyes made even the foolhardy Francis pause. How long the frail strength of the princess would have been a match for Francis is a question, but at this moment at the Cosmopolitan Picture, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies as Princess Mary, Charles Brandon comes to her rescue.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES—BY ANN LISLE

OVER and over again in varying forms, I put this question to myself. Like a mad woman I got up and stormed up and down my office, trying to figure out the answer. But the personal equation of Rosa Cardova is beyond me. So is her real feeling for Jim. After a time mechanically and without realizing what I was doing, I stopped pacing up and down the office and slipped into my desk chair. Of themselves my fingers began sorting out the sheaf of notes I'd taken during the day. Presently I found myself at the files getting out all matter pertaining to the Yelda Corporation.



Instinctively I had turned to my work. I was looking for comfort. Perhaps I felt subconsciously that in a world where so much was crumbling under my feet, it were wise to assure myself of one other basic thing beside my undying love for Jim. Furthermore, I felt an obligation to the business.

Suddenly I straightened back my tired shoulders and said to myself sternly:

"You've borrowed ten thousand dollars on the strength of your faith in this business—and Tony's faith in you. Now, Barbara Anne make good! Jim is far away. You can't reach him now, so you can't fight for his love. But you can fight for something to aid him if—his own projects fail."

And so I dismissed from my mind Rosa Cordova and the menace to my happiness I feel she is likely to be. After a time I became absorbed in what I was doing. I made rough drafts of advertisements for the Yelda campaign. I blocked out ideas. Some I cast aside, others I worked over until they satisfied me. On and on I went, absorbed in the joy of creating.

I lost all idea of time. My work swallowed me. Suddenly from the doorway I heard a voice of greeting:

"Well, young woman, have you ever heard of the sacred institution of dinner?"

There stood Mr. Haldane. At his side, clinging shyly to his arm, was Irma Warren. She gazed about my office with the complimentary little aid of being awestruck, which makes her seem so young and naive.

With the utmost pride and joy I ran forward to welcome my dear old chief—the man with whom I began a happy working career. How he and Irma got here I didn't know or care. Too much fact of having Loren Haldane in my office was sufficient cause for pride. But as soon as we'd exchanged our first greetings and the office had been duly admired, he insisted on explaining.

"We gave ourselves the honor of calling on the bride and groom this evening," he announced with old-fashioned courtesy. "But they were not at home. Then Irma suggested that it would be no more than polite to go and pay you our compliments. When we arrived at the Burgos mansion we found Miss Carlotta on the point of leaving. She wished to return, but we would not permit it."

Mr. Haldane broke off, beaming with the assurance that everything must be perfectly clear to me. But Irma, seeing my look of puzzled wonder, supplied the missing links in the chain.

"Miss Sturgess was with that splendid Mr. Norreys. They were going out to dinner on one of the roofs. And we wouldn't let them spoil it," she cried, with naive acknowledgment that she considers three a crowd. "But she said they'd intended calling for you here in case you'd fallen into a sea of work. We begged to come instead. I hope you don't mind?"

"I love it!" I cried.

Irma beamed and Mr. Haldane appeared properly gratified. There was no need to explain that my exclamation was due to equal parts of delight in seeing them and in finding that Carlotta and Tony were getting on well enough to make engagements on their own initiative.

A world in which my dreams for Carlotta and Tony are coming true seems a pretty good place. Something deep inside me whispered that such a happy world as this isn't going to be marred by having Rosa Cordova come between Jim and me.

"You haven't had your dinner," announced Mr. Haldane kindly. "Irma and I are going to take you out and see that you don't starve. Not a word, my child. Our evening is yours, and the first step toward making it enjoyable is to see that you don't get a hunger-headache."

So I found myself being cared for and catered to in a fashion that made my heart sing with gratification for friends such as these two. The entire evening was charming, simple and homey. When we left the restaurant there was a hitch about getting a taxicab. As Mr. Haldane stepped forward to speak to the starter Irma slid her arm into mine and asked breathlessly:

"Uncle's so proud. He wouldn't like me to be asking about a man —who's gone off and forgotten me."

Landru—His Secret Love Affairs

First Authentic Story of Frencn Bluebeard, Who Won 283 Women, Written By William Le Queux

LANDRU, in one of his escapades, ran afoul of the girl's mother. This was when he sought to marry Fernande.

Mademoiselle's mother, who met Landru, was not at all satisfied with her daughter's lover, especially when she heard that he had proposed marriage. From the first she had some intuition that he was an adventurer; but the daughter laughed at her mother's warnings. The mother, however, took her daughter to Rocrol, and there, they saw the Mayor of the town, who, on making inquiry found that no such person as Guillet, either father or son, had ever been known there.

But even that did not deter Fernande from meeting Monsieur Guillet again and again, until at last she went to keep house for him in the Rue Rochenouart. Indeed, Monsieur "Lucien" had met her mother face to face, and had, with amazing audacity, laughed at her when she openly accused him of being an escroc.

"Pyou, my dear Madame," he said blandly, "I am as honest as yourself if I have told a fancy story. It is only what every man does when he loves a girl.

Time went on.

That Mademoiselle Segret lived very happily with Lucien, she herself testifies. She had not the slightest suspicion that the Great Lover was married and had a family. She never dreamed that his constant absences from their cozy flat was due to the marrying of other women whom he fleeced, or his brief visits to his wife.

They lived the life of thousands of other Parisians, going out to restaurants at night, and to theatres, music-halls, and cinematographs, for it must be remembered Landru had the money he had secured from the blackmailer Bisiaux, at the price of Madame Jaume's life, and he was enjoying himself hugely upon it, though always parsimonious, and always noting every centime of expenditure in that well worn pocket-book.

At that period Paris was much disturbed by the shells of "Big Berths" and the constant air-raids by the "Gothas," therefore, when her lover invited her to go out to Gambais, to see his little property, she was delighted.

On that occasion there were two return tickets—not one single and one return, as before!

The weeks went on. Fernande was charmed with the country villa.

Her mother did her utmost to induce Fernande to leave Landru, but the girl was—as she herself admitted to me—entirely fascinated by him. He held her in his toils, just as he had the two hundred odd women before her!

Presently, however, Landru's finances became weak at a low ebb. The fact was that, late one night, he had left the Rue Rochechouart in order to meet one of the kindred spirits of the underworld in the Monmartre, and there, in a cafe in the Place Blanche, he met, quite by chance, a pretty, dark-eyed girl, with whom he spent a riotous evening, first at a cabaret and afterwards at a night restaurant.

After they parted, he found, to his chagrin, that he—expert coerce that he was—had actually been robbed of his wallet, containing forty pounds!

In a few days he realised that, in order to support his latest fiancee, to whom he was in reality devoted as far as such a heartless scoundrel could be, he must obtain money from somewhere; so once again he advertised himself as "an eligible bachelor" who was desirous of marrying.

This brought him a number of replies. From three of the women who answered he subsequently obtained small sums of money on various pretexts, and then decamped; but among those who replied was a certain Madame Pascal, a rather good-looking, slim, dark-haired widow, whose husband had been killed at the Front. She was aged thirty-six, and was working at a fashionable dressmaker's near the Opera.

Landru, in answer to her letter, made an appointment and met her in a cafe in the Rue Royale, where he presented himself as "Monsieur Forest." For some reason unknown, he also wrote to her in a disguised hand, under the name of "Barjeun." So in both names they corresponded!

The great assassin must have had some reason for this, but until now it has never been made plain.

Mme. Pascal had a young niece, named Marie Jeanne Fauchet, who worked with her, and in the workroom—so the girl later on related—it became common talk that her aunt was to marry "an monsieur tres bien.

We now come to the date, March 28, 1918—a cold day in Paris, with rain and sleet. On that day Mme. Pascal, fascinated by her bald-headed, full-bearded lover—as were all the others—made her visit to the lonely villa on the Gambais road. The usual one return and one single tickets were taken!

Why?

Mme. Pascal lived in a small apartment in the Rue Stendhal and possessed some very shabby and rickety furniture, worth only twenty pounds or so. Landru had seen it, and within himself had secretly estimated its value. The woman was a native of Toulouse, and her past—well, it need not be exposed in these pages.

Suffice it to say that she found Gambais as charming as all the long list of murdered women had found it. She sat at the same table in the salle-a-manger over which others had fallen poisoned by the assassin.

Surely Landru was an outstanding criminal, for while he was fascinated by Fernande Segret, and felt a real affection for her, he was entertaining this poor, unsuspecting dressmaker to whom he had promised marriage solely because he hoped to possess himself of the proceeds of her paltry household goods!

Again we have the fact that Landru was only a murderer for sous. After his terms of imprisonment he had thought of murder as a trade, and as one writer very aptly put it, he began to look out for middle-aged women with fifty pounds to a hundred pounds' worth of property. It is probable enough that, in the pursuit and in the wooing of these wretched victims, he found some sort of pleasure. But there is, in the facts, no reason to suppose that

Henri Landru as He Appeared in Court Under Heavy Guard.

THE STORY SO FAR

Landru's early life is described by M. Le Queux in the opening chapter of his story of the world's greatest love criminal. After years of petty swindling he turned his attention to victimizing women, making love to them, getting control of their property, and then killing them. Mme. Cuchet was one of the first. Landru poisoned her and her son Andre in a villa rented with her money and burned their bodies in a furnace. He then made love to Mme. Laborde-Line. Meanwhile the police investigated his activities at the villa and he shrewdly placed for time, going to Lyons and notifying them he would have to be gone a week or more. Mean while he made love to several other women, including Nina Lanvelois, to whom he wrote affectionately and got her to sign over her money. His affair with Miss Laporte followed. Next he killed Mme. Heon. Andree Babelay, a pretty shopgirl, fell into his clutches and died. Then Buisson and Mme. Jaume followed. The police net was now drawing close around the arch fiend.

Life Career of the World's Greatest Love Criminal, as Shown by the Archives of the Paris Police he was in his vocation by sexual passion.

The dates of his two hundred odd courtships and his fifteen or more murders make it impossible to believe that he sought, as some notorious scoundrels, to exult in the agony of his victims. Once he had made sure of their money—as in the case of Smith in the "Brides-in-the-bath" case—his only concern was to kill them quickly. He was first, last, and always a man of business. Women were to Landru as mere raw material to provide him with a modest livelihood.

Yet he was adroit always. He was adroit with Madame Pascal. He lost no time. On March 28th, the victim went out to Gambais, but on April 5th she breathed her last, and six days later Landru sold her furniture for just under seventeen pounds!

It happened this way.

While Fernande Segret remained in the "nest of love" in Paris, Landru was away upon his money-making adventure with the smooth-haired widow.

Unfortunately for Landru, Madame Pascal had announced her forthcoming marriage to her colleges, and also to a friend, Madame Carbonnel who—much to the lover's annoyance—had accompanied them to the Invalides station, and had seen the "happy" pair off to Gambais. Madame Pascal took with her her pet cat.

Yet even this meeting with his victim's friend did not deter Landru from accomplishing his object. He had now become utterly callous and defiant. His only object in life at the moment was Mademoiselle Segret.

IN Landru's memorandum-book there is entered in his handwriting a note concerning Madame Pascal. He describes her, under the date he first met her, as "Pasca. Youthful looking. Tailor costume, with wide felt hat." And that same Black Book contains a note under the date of April 5, at the head of the loose leaf, "17 h. 15."—which means in French 5:15 p. m.—the hour of the victim's death!

To describe the actual drama—one of many in the life of Landru—would occupy many pages; but I will try to tell it briefly.

Madame Pascal had been warned by her sister, Madame Fauchet, who held the plausible adventurer in suspicion, but on arrival at "The Hermitage," she laughed at her sister's fears. She was essentially a woman of the world, with a past, and she was no devoted to her new fiance, and was looking forward to an early marriage with great contentment. Landru, as was usual in such circumstances, was ineffably charming, and full of elegant and poetical speeches which fascinated her.

The great assassin was down to his last fifty-franc note. He had been tricked for his foolishness. That he—an international thief and an associate of the greatest blackmailers in Paris—should have had his wallet stolen by a mere chit of a girl, filled him with fury and chagrin.

He had decided that only by the death of the widow Pascal—at whom he was inwardly sneering as "an old woman"—could he carry on his fist in which he had installed Mademoiselle Segret. Landru was not really an artist in crime; he was merely a soulless criminal, without a thought of his victims. He was just a butcher who slaughtered lambs, sheep, or pigs, for profit.

DAILY SHORT STORY—SECOND WOMAN

By Marla Luttrell

WHEN a woman has had three babies within five [illegible] she is not likely to have enough surplus energy to want to combat the wiles of a jazzing flapper who gazes on a husband snatching expedition.

All of which sounds not a bit like the simple life of the little mountain rimmed Tennessee town where Ann Bufard had lived contentedly until Lou Marshall arrived to teach a kindergarten class.

Now, Ann was not the story book variety of flapper. Her long hair was smoothly coiled. She did not affect short clothes nor gaily clocked hose, nor any rakish hats that have the allure of youth. She dressed modestly, had a soft, appealing voice, joined the Sunday School in the First Methodist Church the first Sunday three weeks until she was teaching the infant class.

Doting fathers looked approvingly at her and set her up as an example to their wayward offspring who had been away from home and had learned so many things that had not been set down in the catalogue.

Anne Buford was fluffing the curly brown hair of her eldest born, preparatory to sending her to kindergarten, while the second little girl waited impatiently in the doorway. Phil, Anne's handsome young husband, was slipping a new white leather belt around a fresh Palm Beach suit.

"I declare, Phil, you are good to take the children to school this hot weather and then go back to get them. We certainly have added all of our domestic problems," Anne laughed as she gave little Anne a final pat.

"You're a dear husband to help me with the babies, but then, of course, as millions of mothers have suggested to their careless husbands, they're as much yours as they are mine."

It was a month after that when Anne heard the disquieting rumor that it was not filial duty alone that made Phil Buford rush to kindergarten and Sunday school with his two little girls, but that he was impelled by the age-old instinct of sex attraction.

It had never occurred to her that Phil's mind would stray from the narrow marital track.

The gate clicked. She looked through a window. Lou Marshall, in immaculate white linen, was coming up the walk. Anne smiled to herself when she thought how she had hoped to Phil that Lou had not waited for her to call, but often dropped in to see her.

Anne grabbed a powder puff and dusted her pretty little nose. Then she answered the door bell, the nursing baby at her breast, her face nicely camouflaged with its usual welcoming smile. "Come right in!" She looked anxiously at the trees bending in a sudden strong wind. "Why, there's going to be a storm! I'll have to call the children. They're playing in the sand. Do sit down, and will you hold the baby just a minute?"

Lou took him rather gingerly. She wasn't particularly fond of getting her crisp frock rumpled up. Anne ran through the kitchen and down the back steps, calling the little girls. The heel of the old house slipper she was wearing caught on a splintered plank. She went down in a little moaning heap. One of the little girls rushed into the house to summon Lou. "Quick! Come! Mamma's fallen down the steps. She's hurted—bad!"

A kind hearted neighbor answered Lou's call of distress. The doctor came. Phil rushed home from the office.

Anne forgot her domestic problem in the rush of anxiety for her little brood. Phil could manage without her, but her babies needed her. How could she stay there quietly in bed while the ligaments in her ankle healed? The doctor said she would have to walk on crutches for at least ten days.

She would wire for her mother. She could get there within twelve hours. While they were discussing what was to be done that day, who would take care of the children, Lou quietly picked up Anne's discarded gingham apron and said that she would stay until Anne's mother arrived.

Anne tried not to see the sudden light that leaped in Phil's handsome black eyes, but she did see, and it registered like a white-hot iron on her heart. "I'll stay at home from the office and help," volunteered the wily Phil.

Anne did not want anything to eat, so she did not know what the new cook had managed to prepare for the family feast. But Phil knew and the little girls knew and they howled about it.

"Nothing but jelly and bread and milk and I'm hungry," little Anne commented tersely, looking over the almost empty table.

"Hush," said Phil; "the chops burned and something is the matter with the potatoes we have. They're watery and wouldn't mash."

"Shucks," came the reply of the unconvinced child, "mamma can make 'em mash. Mamma can do anything," stoutly boasted his eldest born.

Phil sneaked off to town on a pretext of business, but really to get something to eat. Whatever he ate disagreed with him and Lou had to summon the doctor again.

"The whole darn works have gone to pot," he groaned in agony. "I never half appreciated how wonderful Anne is until today. She's none of your useless pretty dress-up kind of girls; she can make a man comfortable. Go ask her what to do until that confounded old medico gets here. I'll be hanged if I don't get relief."

Anne insisted on getting up, hopped into Phil's room on one foot and began to do things to relieve the pain.

It was music in Anne's troubled ears later when he said, "Lou might as well have gone home this morning. She's about as much use in the world as a humming bird."

Anne's head was in the air when she said, "Lou might as well have gone home this morning. She's about as much use in the world as a humming bird."

GIRLS TRAINING FOR AMERICAN'S SWIM

Will a girl who swims in salt water or one who swims in fresh water win the one-mile swim which is to be the feature of the Boston American's annual carnival in Charles River Basin, West End, August 15?

This question is being seriously discussed by the mermaids of this and other cities and towns. The winner will be declared the champion girl swimmer of New England.

Some experts feel that the best swimmers are developed in salt water while others believe the speediest are those who practice in fresh water.

The winners of first and second prizes last year, Miss Olive Holland of Wollaston and Miss Ruth Norwood of New Bedford, do most of their swimming in salt water, while the third and fourth prize winners, Misses Selma Carlstrom of Worcester and Irene De Mars of Ludlow, confine their aquatic performances chiefly to lakes, because they live inland.

ENTRIES POURING IN.

Entries for the American's one-mile classic are pouring in to the Swimming Editor. Present indications are that there will be a big field of starters and that the one queen who wins first honors will have a big task cut out for her.

As the American's race is to be sanctioned by the N. E. A. A. U. the amateur standing of all merchants entering will be assured. They may enter any other event reviewed without their amateur standing being questioned. Realizing what the Boston American has done and is doing to promote swimming on a healthful sport, officials of the organization say they are glad to co-operate to make the girls' swim a success.

HOLDS ONE-MILE RECORD.

Miss Holland now holds the record in New England for one mile. She established it last Fourth of July when she negotiated the distance in 32 minutes, 21 seconds. That's the mark the girls are trying to equal or better in their practice swims at the various beaches of Greater Boston and in the lakes and ponds of the interior.

The Swimming Editor expects to announce in a few days what the five grand prizes will be. He also expects to arrange for their display in a downtown store window where sea nymphs and their friends may look them over. Every prize will be worth while. A fine bronze medal will be awarded to EVERY GIRL WHO FINISHES.

So, from on high, let us hear from you! There's no age limit. If you can swim a mile you may enter by merely filling out the coupon printed in the Boston American and mailing it to us. Every precaution will be taken to protect girls during the race. Sit down today and enter your name for the BIG SWIM.
